. . . 1960

It is people, not books and buildings, who make a university . . . people in cycles of four years, so that the university is as changeable as the human personality is varied. This is the story of the people who made OU in 1960 . . . they recognized Cutler Hall as a symbol, they worried about time and the lack of it, they were Greeks or they weren't but they were all people moving in the same direction. It was a step-by-step direction. It included things like a trip to Louisville for an OU first as far as sports went; it was the first year of the long hike from the Education Building to the Life Science Building. It was when Louis Armstrong and Robert Frost were on the same stage in the same week. It was "Carousel" and the first political convention. There was a scandal that began to make a lot of people realize just what almost meant, and a new pride grew in OU. All of it, the people and the books and the buildings, were Ohio University, 1960.

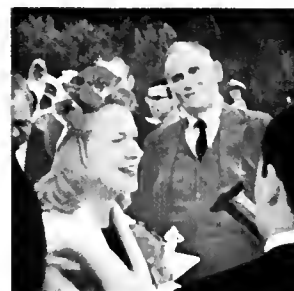

Most Saturdays at OU in the fall of 1960 brought people by the bleachersful to the stadium. And most of those Saturdays brought the band back home with turned-around hats. It brought people back to classes, and filled the bookstores with people who emptied them of books. There were last-time picnics to try to stretch the summer out, and there were autumn smells and Indian summer and rain. It meant elections of class officers whose number had been reduced by Student Council. It was the starting in again by the people who made OU.

The social season was "twinging" around Homecoming with the Bobcats undefeated. A skunk and a shaggy dog won prizes in a parade and a queen was crowned. Greek Week was caught up in the carnival spirit from its beginning at the Torch Run to its end in the Center Ballroom.

The first snow came, and it was exciting. But before the winter was over it was just routine to wake up to a white world. The people of OU moved indoors. They were getting acquainted now, and it wasn't a new year anymore. They flocked to ball games—they gave out with loud school spirit that sent the Bobcats all the way to Louisville, and a lot of the people along on a special train. They spent quiet hours at the Center—over chess in the Bunch of Grapes Room or around a piano in the 1804 Lounge or at the TV set in the 1954 one. And they studied.

It wasn't all snow in 1960. There was rain, too. It was still indoor weather, and finals week made the library busy. People found funny ways to study—in the stacks, almost anywhere in a dormitory, with the record player going or in complete silence, early and late. After finals there was more snow, but Spring kept trying.

In March it finally came. And with it came the first flurry of J-Prom practices, with the withdrawal of several fraternities from the competition. A brove few took the trip to Lake Hope while it was only almost-spring, and the rest followed later. It got easier to ignore books, and for the seniors the counted days got smaller. They saw OU newly, and marked off last times. Other people drew for rooms for '61 and applied for offices and got them. Old officers retired, and said, "Time to do what we want to do," but somehow ended up being busier than ever. Finals time came again, and this time the studiers found an elm on the green to lean against, or tried to read a semester's notes in the sun-bathing area behind the dorm, or on the beach of the quarry. Second-season frisbees were put to use.

And then there was the packing up of things—twice as much as had come down on the first trip. The seniors stayed and graduated, and the class of 1960 left, and the senior class was full of different faces. The bleachers which had drawn many people out on cool fall Saturdays were empty now. The people who made OU in 1960 had gone home.

ATHENS, OHIO: OU'S HOMETOWN

OU students came to school and found a home, an alma mater. They climbed the first hill toward a life with education. The early morning sun broke through the mist above the chapel as they passed on the way to an eight o'clock, and they relaxed in the Center for a between-class cup of coffee.

The campus changed when leaves, rain and snow fell. The students paused in any weather to talk with new friends wherever they met. They noticed the work done by the townspeople to keep their paths clear. They began to realize that this help had always been there to make the way easier.

These people of the town provided services the students needed. They became personalities after a few visits to a shop or store.

Townpeople enjoy walking on the green.

The barber may have been a political expert or just a fisherman with many stories, but he could cut hair. He prepared the student for special days and they helped him support a family. The money they had carefully deposited in a bank was spent in Athens for a filled tooth, a sweater and occasionally a parking ticket.

Cement sidewalks and well-worn paths led from the town back to campus homes. Here some stood in line for meals and then hurried on to class. Some sat and studied on the campus green, while others rushed on to work—studying, or earning spending money, food or room. Warm days slowed the pace. Students shared the fountain with townspeople who walked across the green.

Spring and fall weather brings students outside even to study, and they find it hard not to daydream.

Many evenings were spent in the library, for needed information was to be found there. Not until daily work was done could the student relax with the special someone.

Some worked late into the night. Athens business used student help to maintain good service. The student changed from customer to clerk, and often late studiers and the busboys in the empty restaurants were still awake when the rest of Athens slept.

DORMS

It's clean sheet days and busy signals . . . spontaneous beauty clinics in the john . . . dinner lines . . . a coke machine—out of order, a mailbox—empty. It's a roommate . . . a guy to borrow a tie from. It's all the home there is at OU.

Decisions, suggestions and questions of Council are passed on to dorm residents in informal meetings.

With a new president and a new dorm on the Green, East Green Council continued old policies and began new ones for the residents of nine men's and two women's dorms. The Washington Hall Glee Club grew to include Jefferson and Lincoln to form The Presidential Triad Chorus. Its debut was the Varsity Show and it sang for the Green in a special Christmas program.

Council continued the East

Green Formol and the Carnival and study table for freshmen. A culture committee invited professors to talk informally on art, literature and music. University policies were clarified to the Green by inviting administration members to attend Tuesday night Council meetings.

Policies developed by representatives to Council are read at floor meeting.

The president's gavel called to order an Interdorm meeting.

interdorm council

The president, vice-president and social chairman of each women's dormitory met bi-monthly in Interdormitory Council to unify governmental and social activities. Interdorm planned and guided Freshman Day in the fall. A sneak attack by upperclassmen awakened the freshmen in the early morning, and till that evening, they were under upperclass command.

The room drawing situation was discussed by the Council until a simpler procedure was found. With Women's League, an activity file was established to unite the information about any office in any group. Interdorm B-Dinner, honoring scholastic achievement, and the Interdorm Formal in the spring were sponsored for dormitory residents.

Dorm officers absorb the ideas of those who lead and guide them.

They discuss and share suggestions from their house councils.

With new ideas and Council decisions they return to guide their dorm members.

A mixer with Howard Hall began the social season for the men of Biddle. The first dorm on the Green to attend Bobcat football games as a group, Biddle also took an active parts in intramural sports, winning the fall interdorm football and basketball championships. New Year's Eve was celebrated early with a December party for the men and their dates. Biddle joined forces with Bryan for a Christmas formal with open house at the dorm. Prizes were given for the best room decorations at a house party for men only. Second semester brought an ice-skating party, more mixers, a hayride and the usual spring sports. One scholarship was awarded each semester to a deserving dorm resident. Guest nights, with different faculty members as guests of the dorm for an evening, let the men meet the profs informally "at home."

One hundred and five boys in a girls' dorm! Sound unusual? Margaret Boyd, the first woman graduate, would be quite surprised to see her namesake today, housing men for the first time in its history.

Dubbed the "Beasts," the men began their fall activities with a hayride and lived up to their name in their fall football season. Ping-pong enthusiasts enjoyed a midwinter tourney. Christmas was a busy season with the "Beasts" playing Santa Claus to underprivileged Athens children by buying toys for them. Strictly on the social side was the Christmas Formal. Though Boyd is considered a part of East Green, the adjustment to uphill living was a big one. Vacuuming rugs was a new experience, and it took the boys awhile to get used to full-length mirrors!

The men of Bush were proud of the two-story high Bobcat carrying out the Homecoming theme, "We aim to down Western Michigan." A fall hayride, followed by a barn party, opened the social season. Bryan joined Bush at the ice rink for a skating party. Intermural athletic events were important at Bush, and the East Green badminton championship was the result. During the Christmas season, Bush joined with a sorority in giving a party for orphans in the Athens area. Mixers, water fights, intra-dorm card tournaments and the Spring Formal rounded out the activities scene.

To fifty-six upperclass women who reside on the third and fourth floors of the Ohio University Center, cooperation is not an abstract term. From the attic construction of a Homecoming float to conducting all dorm activities and rules on the honor system, Center coeds find that their best work is done together. Whether Dad's Weekend is to be planned, the "Crystal Christmas" decorations and programs designed, budget problems to be solved, the girls in the Center's "penthouse" do their finest with minimum formal organization. Add the advantages of rooftop sunbathing and easy access to campus recreational activities, and it's easy to see why Center Dorm girls think they are on top of the world.

Blazing across the front of Gam were such football slogans as "Axe Xavier," and "Filter Kent." New basketball uniforms must have added punch to the team, because they won the East Green and campus championships. During finals a new dorm resident arrived with a Coschignano nometage — born to the resident counselors. In the spring the braver Gamertsfelder residents ventured down the Hocking in a raft they made from a tree! At Easter the men entertained underprivileged children with a movie, dinner and an Easter egg hunt.

Being one of two women's dorms on the Green was a distinct advantage as evidenced by the crowded conditions outside Jefferson's doors at 12:30 each weekend night. Homecoming found a Jefferson girl on the queen's court. Jeffies worked together on the float. Scholarship was encouraged by compulsory study periods, totaling five hours a week. At every semester end, the floor section holding the highest grade average was treated to a pizza party. "Jefferson, Jefferson is our cry . . ."—so went the familiar fight song echoing across the Green so many times as an example of the spirit and enthusiasm of Jefferson Hall.

Halloween time found a strange assortment of characters eating in the cafeteria.

A haywagon transports Johnson men and their dates to a wiener roast.

Unity and Johnson Hall are one. The smallness of the dorm contributes to the closeness of the men. This year the men of Johnson enjoyed together four mixers with sororities and dorms, a hoyride and two formols. At the Christmas Formol a chubby, jolly Sonto Claus gave favours and corsoges to all the men's dates. Mother's Weekend and Father's Weekend were big events. The men threw a big party for moms and dods on the Soturdoy of each weekend.

In September, the negative rather than the positive was accentuated by the residents of Lincoln Hall, making their debut in OU society. Two hundred seventy-four men had the bare essentials—no pillows, no telephones, unfinished floors, no officers, no money and no screens (flies outnumbered men fifty to one!) The negative proved valuable, for it was the rallying point which brought the men together determined to improve conditions and rank Lincoln among the best. The wheels of improvement began to turn. "An Old-Fashioned Christmas" was the theme for a Christmas Formal that was a part of an active social season. The positive was now accentuated; negative thinking had been eliminated. The foundation had been laid for a dorm that will play a leading role in the future.

Lindley Hall's opening mixer was a good way to begin the year. A glimpse of the Lindley Lately Night Club could be caught through a peek hole in the door which led to the dance floor. Black covered walls were decorated with pink elephants and the nametags were shaped like cocktail glasses. The Homecoming theme was "Don't Sweat the Small Stuff." A huge Bobcat held a small Bronco securely in his teeth; so securely that the girls dismantling the float had trouble separating them. "Waterloo" melody brought to mind memories of the huge water fight at the dorm. Three needy families in Athens were taken care of at Christmas when the girls contributed food, canned goods and clothes to make Christmas happy for them.

"Yea, Tiffin!" The cheer echoed through the stadium during Homecoming half-time ceremonies when it was announced that Tiffin's meat platter had won first place in house decorations with the theme "Michigan Brond Horsemeat is the Bobcats' Meow." The men worked around the purpose "Learning Among Friends," not only in book learning but in service, tolerance and fellowship as well. Tiffin sponsored two orphans at Christmas. They invited campus personalities to discuss issues at dorm coffee forums. Fellowship came through hay rides, a tobogganing party, pointing the crest in the Cavern and the Winter Formal. A scholarship committee was formed to keep the upperclassmen at Tiffin at their peak in grades.

The men of Washington Hall added a trophy case to the dorm this year—the first on the Green. Christmas was busy, beginning with a "Hanging of the Greens" mixer with the girls of Jefferson. Each girl was given a Christmas decoration as she entered the door, and she helped tinsel the dorm. The decorating was followed by dancing and wiener roasting at the open fireplace. In December, the men escorted their favorite coeds to the winter formal. Children from the Athens County Home were entertained at a Christmas party.

Unity was the theme for the year at Voight Hall's officers pre-college meeting and picnic. Carrying the theme into practice, Voigt coeds joined the Unity Circle, when each girl was given a red rose and a Unity Booklet commemorating Dean Erma Voigt, and newcomers learned the symbolism of the pillars. Freshmen and Senior Days, Pixie-Angel Week and the yearly House Org Sneak-Out helped keep this spirit alive. Christmas came to Voigt in the form of festive red and white candy canes which set the mood for the Formal, "Candy Cane Capers." In January, a New York skyline was the background for the "Misty Sixty" dance. The Easter Egg Hunt brought all men's housing units out in search of the golden egg with "riddled" clues. The rewards? For the lucky winner, it was a rabbit-shaped trophy, and for the Athens County Children's Home, Easter baskets bought with the proceeds of the Hunt.

DORM LIFE: COMPANIONS AND COMPLAINTS

Destination . . . Athens. Journey . . . completed. Future . . . the job of unloading, hauling . . . arranging a room.

The dormitory, a student's first Ohio University contact, is more than just a housing unit of brick and stone divided into triples, doubles or singles.

The dormitory is a home of which he becomes a member. The complaints about college chow, or getting on outside line, or of having to walk the hill every day at eight o'clock to Porter, then dash across campus, down the hill to a class in the Education Building at nine o'clock are all a part of dorm life.

But offsetting the complaints are the intimacy of expanding friendships, the unity and enthusiasm of building a float, decorating for a Christmas dance or just plain goofing off in an after-hours session.

Learning to live with people of various backgrounds, learning to appreciate their opinions and personalities are part of college development. And where better can this happen than in the college dormitory.

Exchange Of Ideas Works For Peace, Educator Observes

An educated mind is a free mind and the exchange of ideas among college students of different countries is one of the surest avenues toward world peace.

This observation was made by Dr. Oscar Ramos, assistant to the president of the University of Valle in Cali, Colombia.

THE 31-YEAR-OLD administrator, who has studied at Fordham University and Florida Foreign College and in Europe, summed up his belief in the course of higher education by comparing his experience in South America with his study in the United States.

The change will increase the regular semester comprehensive registration fee from $135 to $150 for residents of Ohio.

The increase for out-of-state students will be from $235 to $250 per semester.

Delegate Sees Christian's Role

By Ramesh Sattawalla

With the participation of 3600 delegates from virtually every culture in the world, the 18th Ecumenical Student Conference concluded its second engagement at the University last week.

The conference was addressed by such outstanding Christian leaders as Dr. Martin Luther King, who led the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.; Kermit Eby, professor of social science at the University of Chicago; Bishop Leslie Newbigin, the Church of South India; Harry Daniels, general secretary of the Student Christian Movement of India; and Bola Personally, I think it's heaven for climate and hell for society . . .

Humor has been the great medicinal gift of man through the ages—curing him of spiritual diseases and unfrocking the sham of spinsters and hypocrites. When Mark Twain visited the OU campus (embodied in the artistic reincarnation of Mr. Hal Halbrook) the reception afforded him by the OU audience proved again the timelessness and universality of the therapeutic chuckle.

Mr. Halbrook, armed with a thread-bare rug, a pitcher of water and a few dusty tomes, commented with the carraded intonation of Twain's larynx an everything humorous (which in Twain's case was everything God hath made.)

. . . Then this reporter asked me if Washington was dead when I went to his funeral. . . and I told him, "Some said he was; some said he wasn't" . . .

. . . but I vowed I would put aside all other forms of recreation and attend his wake.

"On questions of segregation I feel somewhat like a missionary, and a missionary should go where the heathen are."

On race in the US . . . "We are overcoming our problems . . . we are making progress. The direction is clear, the will of the people is clear, and the problem will be solved . . ."

"A much better life isn't a pipe-dream, but, with work, can become a reality."

PAPER, YEARBOOK, RADIO, TV TELL CAMPUS NEWS

Photos by Bud Brecht
Copy by Craig Palmer

A student's acquaintance with his campus and the world outside is largely determined by communications and the mass media.

Acting as an intermediary between the significant, newsworthy events which happen and the students these events affect are the news media at Ohio University.

Somewhere behind the scenes, maybe in a darkroom . . . in a busy office . . . at a copy desk . . . at a news wire . . . in a simulated television studio . . . behind a microphone . . . at a turntable . . . in a classroom, students are preparing or learning to prepare the news.

These are the students who spend countless working hours as servants of their public—the OU student body.

These are the students who prepare newspapers and yearbooks, produce radio and television broadcasts. They are the manipulators of the communications tools.

A student carefully reads United Press International wire copy for a WOUB news program.

His camera prepares a story about people.

This is the Athena—BEFORE. Several sub-organizations, each independent from the other, contribute to the final product, the book you are now reading.

Photographers and artists, copy writers and bookkeepers assist in providing the OU student a pictorial account of the 1959-60 school year. Only in the final stage, the finished book, is cohesion provided.

And a production assistant plots the picture's position.

But the camera can't do everything. A technician chooses a negative for printing.

The news is anxiously awaited by a "hungry" student body.

The student broadcaster's voice carries an account of a basketball game to an anxious audience.

A monitor transmits the picture to a classroom.

Where does a student find out what is happening? He watches a telecast, listens to a radio or reads a newspaper.

There isn't really much difference between a student television studio and a finished student newspaper. Both purport to bring about the same results: better communications at Ohio University.

Students at WOUB and THE POST are learning that communications are a necessity if OU students are to be informed. Their endeavor is the contact with the news.

The cameraman jockeys for position in a TV studio.

His hand steadies a turntable ready to spin.

CAROL EARLEY . . . editor. She coordinated, guided, suggested and pitched in and helped! The editor's duties stretched from Frontier Room cup returning to uniting twelve paid staffers.

GAIL LARRICK . . . copy editor. She was responsible for every word in the book. Within the limits of copy blocks and time—a literal interpretation of OU.

LENNY WOLOWIEC . . . assistant editor. He contracted all 360 pages, worked with associate editors and the Athena Queen contest—and didn't let the secret out!

1960 athena

A collection of people at the first paid staff meeting had one thing in common—they wanted to put OU on the pages of a book called the Athena. Planning sessions brought a point of view—a choice to look beyond the surface to the "why" of a university. Then come things like deadlines, revisions, page sequences, seeing both 3 o'clocks in a day, "Egg Specials" at any hour, desk-top sleeping, engrover's and printer's proofs—and a staff that held up under it all for the sake of "The Book."

KEN TAYLOR . . . photo editor. With a small but mighty staff, Ken filled the '60 book with memorable photographs, in an attempt for a new look with more candid, fewer posed.

POLLY MERSHON . . . secretarial manager. It was polly-on-the-spot for typing. Her staff handled correspondence and huge odd jobs.

ED NOONAN . . . business manager. Sometimes known as "Sraage," Ed turned out to be a wise handler of the purse strings of a $30,000 corporation.

BOB LOUFEK . . . photo lab technician. He printed all group shots for the engraver, was head cleaner-upper in the darkrooms and printer of the division pages—his "black period."

BEV BOORSE . . . production manager. She bundled all the photography department's work up for the engraver with proper instructions and prepared the printer's dummy. Pinmate helped with panel-pasting.

The paid staff became recruiters—looking for the talented and the interested to serve as staff members. These faithful people sold ads and yearbooks, wrote copy and shot pictures, typed and addressed and alphabetized, checked identification and made assignments, finding the essence of OU to be captured in art and photography and words. Some made the office their second home, some were there only to return an assignment or a sales book, but they all made the 1960 Athena what it is —by doing their best.

1960 athena queen

Jon Jones, a Lindley Hall sophomore, was chosen 1960 Athena Queen by The Four Freshmen. Jon was surprised with the announcement of her reign-to-be at the Coed Prom in February. Her portrait was chosen from those of representatives of all dormitories and sororities. Jon is a home economics major from Chillicothe, Ohio.

The judges this year were The Four Freshmen. Fittingly, it was in Ohio that they were discovered by Stan Kenton and sent to Hollywood. Uniquely, this group accompanies itself—each of them being versatile instrumentalists. They appeared at Ohio University in 1956.

BRIGHT FUTURE AHEAD FOR BOBCAT GRIDDER AFTER EXCELLENT SEASON

Copy by Ed Wright

The Ohio University football team concluded its best season in twenty-one years when it finished with a fine 7-2 record, the best any Bobcat eleven has compiled since 1939.

OU concluded its surprising season by playing possibly the best game ever in Ohio Stadium. Against heavy odds, the Bobcats used strong, hard-hitting defense against Bowling Green and gained a 9-0 halftime lead. But the Falcons came back strong to win, 13-9.

This ended all hopes of an OU upset and a possible tie for the Mid-American Conference championship. OU finished in second place with a 5-2 slate. The only other loss also came in the conference when OU fell to Miami, 24-0.

The Bobcats of Bill Hess swept over other league foes with ease while defeating all three non-conference foes.

Ohio finished the season ranked ninth in the national small college ratings. Juniors Bob Brooks and Dick Grecni were named honorable mention All-American and little All-American respectively.

At the season's conclusion, fans eagerly looked toward the coming season when all but three seniors will be returning along with a host of freshmen.

All-conference guard Dick Grecni (50) hurriedly attempts to catch Bowling Green's Russ Hepner (25).

"Regardless of the outcome, you will be proud of our boys," head coach Bill Hess says at a pep rally.

It is strange where beauty may be found, but many persons would look towards sports, particularly football, for such a thing. But it is there for the looking. For an example, all we need to do is turn to the football play, as shown in sequence photos from the beginning to the tackle.

Ohio University's swift halfback, Bob Harrison (29) catches a Bowling Green kickoff and starts down the field behind a human wall of blockers.

Sidewiping defenders, he has the right to pick up more yardage before finally being brought down on the OU 37-yard line after having gained a total of 28 yards.

Talking with friends and admirers after a hard-fought game is enjoyed by all players.

Football at Ohio University is a good deal more than just a game played every Saturday afternoon.

For the player it's long and grueling practice sessions every weekday afternoon . . . meals at the boarding table . . . chalk talks . . . tiresome bus or plane trips . . . packing and unpacking uniforms.

For the coaches it's work for about twenty hours a day . . . worry and more worry . . . diagraming plays . . . scouting the opposition.

For the managers it's driving a jeep around the practice fields . . . running the kicking tee out to players . . . lugging heavy equipment around.

For the trainers it's constant attention at all games . . . stopping nose bleeds . . . putting bandages on cuts . . . repairing equipment . . . cleaning mud-filled cleats.

For some students, it's a chance to make some pin money selling programs, pop and pennants, and still see the game.

For the fons, whether they be students or alumni, it's a thrill-packed fall Saturday afternoon of watching the heroes as well as the goats perform at their best . . . long walks to the stadium . . . waving shakers and cheers . . . band hats backwards.

What would Ohio University be without football?

Not always does the football reach the player for whom it is intended.

Brutal defense is becoming a characteristic of Bobcat football teams.

Speed is a prime in football.

The after-game chat with reporters, friends and rooters always interests a football coach, particularly a winning one.

Ohio University's Bill Hess is no exception. In his second year at the helm of the Bobcat fortunes, Hess offers many facial expressions while telling his reactions to the game and offering comments to eager fans of the OU grid squad.

At times, referees have no friends.

Touchdown! the signals say.

The Freshmen provide thrills, many times before empty stands.

The freshmen footballers under the direction of Stan Huntsman showed great promise for the future.

In posting a 3-2 record, the frosh defeated Miami, West Virginia and Marshall. They lost to Dayton and Xavier.

Quarterback Bob Babbitt, a fine passer and field general, has the potential to go on to be one of Ohio University's greatest signal callers. Babbitt broke his collar bone against the Big Green and was missed during the final two games.

The line looked good for the Bobcat's future!

The first night of the Homecoming Weekend was a climax in itself as the 1959 Homecoming queen was announced and she ascended to her throne to reign over the campus for three days.

She was Borbie Evons of Alpha Gamma Delta. Her attendants were Jeanne Heinrich of Jefferson Hall and Joann Trupp of Zeta Tau Alpha.

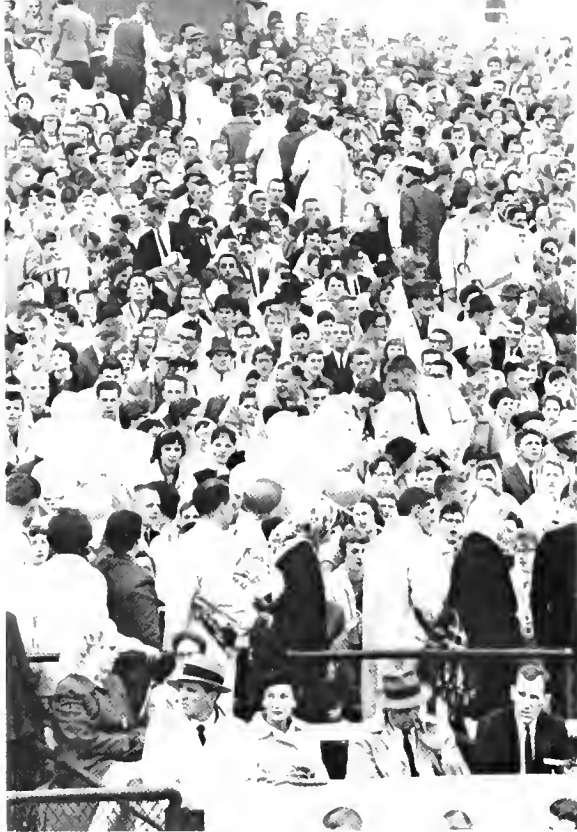

The weekend was a busy one for Borbie and her court. There was the pep rally, a luncheon in their honor, the parade, the dance and of course, the football game on Saturday afternoon. The whole weekend was a happy event but for Borbie Evons the high point had been Friday night.

A hug for President Baker.

As usual, Ohio Stadium is filled; this time to see a Homecoming victory.

A maze of lights and moving parts was Tiffin Hall's winning house decoration.

Homecoming. To Ohio University's organizations, both Greek and independent, it's a time of work and competition. For weeks ahead of time, fraternities, sororities and dorms plan and build for the weekend when OU's alums return.

There are floats and house decorations to design and build, dinners and parties to plan. When it's over, some have trophies; many don't.

Rusty Bryant played at the Homecoming dance. Many went and danced; many were too tired to dance or even to go.

For many, the climax of Ohio University's 1959 Homecoming was the football victory over Western Michigan.

What would a football game, basketball game or pep meeting have been without the Ohio University cheerleaders? The aim of the cheerleaders, eight Varsity and six Freshmen, was to create more school spirit and to boost the teams' morale. The cheerleaders accomplished this by working more closely with the coaches and having cheer sheets printed for the student body. The freshmen were introduced to the cheerleaders at the Freshmen Convocation. Shortly after, tryouts took place. Sixty tried out; six were chosen. These freshmen cheered at Homecoming and at every other basketball game. The cheerleaders were invited to the Football Bonquet with the stipulation that they lead a cheer. They did it—the girls in heels and sheaths, the fellows in dress suits. They weren't too agile, but they had fun!

HARRIERS EXPECT IMPROVEMENT

The OU cross country team again could not even its season record.

After miles of leg work, all Burch Olgesby's harriers could do was compile a 2-6 dual meet record and place fourth in the five-team Mid-American Conference Meet, hosted by OU.

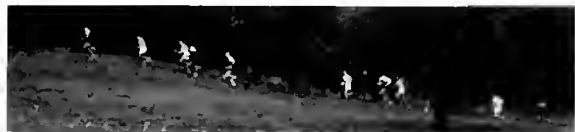

The future, however, appears brighter. A freshman team that won all six of its dual meets while taking the Ohio AAU Invitational Meet is upcoming.

SOCCER TEAM POSTS A WINNING SEASON

Success at last!

After three seasons of nothing but frustration, followers of the OU soccer team had something to cheer about. The booters of John McComb come up with the first winning season in their history, a 6-2-1 mark, after winning only two of sixteen games in the last three years.

The only thing marring on undefeated Ohio League season was a 2-2 tie with Kenyon. This put the Bobcats in second place, behind Akron.

Slippery Rock and Pittsburgh caused the non-league losses.

INTRAMURALS OFFER VARIETY OF SPORTS

Students act as referees as well as participants in intramural activities.

Football is one of the favorites of the seventeen IM sports offered at OU.

With the attention of the university generally turned to varsity sports, a huge interest was also being shown to the various intramural sports.

Under the direction of Graduate Assistants Dick Antes and John Woechter, the Intramural Department enjoyed another successful year, with more student participation and more spectator interest.

Seventeen sports were offered, plus special field days.

Political Week—seven days of campaigning, poster-making and breath-holding as sixty-one candidates became thirty-two, and then eleven. Time sacrificed to write platforms and to maintain the personal contact so important in winning votes was sometimes spent to no avail. The thirty-six per cent of the students who braved October's rain to utilize the opportunity of practicing democracy echoed the actions of politics that exist beyond the college door.

Speeches listened to and posters recognized resulted in ballots marked, then counted to make known to the campus the final decisions, important to both voters and candidates . . . who will lead us?

Lights in the dorms on the Green for study table, a man colled before the dormitory court, a representative from a dorm ar a fraternity accepting a trophy for the highest grades, the Freshman Mixer, a leadership conference, a letter from a Korean foster child . . . this is the work of MUGB. With the tap of a gavel, twelve men are called to order as Men's Union Governing Board. They represent all men on campus through East Green Council, IFC and outside housing. It is their duty to coordinate the policy of all men through their goal of unity. This is done by fostering in men the true purpose of a university—scholarship, leadership and social activities. The Student Government Room buzzes with discussion.

A point is emphasized.

Women's League introduced OU freshmen women to college fashions with the aid of "Peanuts" and his friends at its fall style show.

A mack screening was a feature of the Leadership Conference, League sponsored in the fall, followed by a training conference in the spring. Socially, League again held the girl-ask-boy Caed Pram and Bride's Bazaar with local merchants giving OU bride's-to-be a peek at what's to come. League activities were coordinated by Senate, fifteen elected officers who met bi-monthly with the Dean of Women. With the guidance of Senate, League regulated dorm and sorority rules to make OU caeds good campus citizens.

For the student with a yen to relax there is a variety of activity at the OU Center, from music programs and art exhibits to billiard or bowling tournaments and bridge lessons. The group that schedules the card and chess lessons, the sports tournaments and the dance classes is Center Program Board. They plan coffee forums, presided over by faculty members and guest speakers. These cover topics from current events to marriage. For freshmen, they plan Freshman Frolics, a fun-night of stunts and games closed to upper-classmen. The program the Board produces is well-balanced with social and intellectual events. Hiring bands and decorating the ballroom for Mother's Weekend, Homecoming and Caft Centre round out the Board's role in making the Center one of OU's favorite recreation spots.

Early in March, Memorial Auditorium was turned into a Convention Hall. Campaign signs shouted the names of favorite sons, electioneering slogans and the names of fifty-four states and territories. Terms like "caucus" and "poll the delegation" and "pressure group" were used familiarly.

With nearly 2000 students directly involved, OU staged its first Mock Political Convention. Student vote chose the Democratic Party, an Executive Board of ten guided the operations and chairmen for the fifty-four delegations were chosen in special screenings. Each delegation was made up of volunteers who were introduced to the policies of the state they were to represent.

A platform committee prepared legislation to be submitted to the convention and pressure groups in the areas of labor, the farmer, business and foreign policy tried to influence the committee. The platform was presented and discussed following the keynote speech on the first day of the convention.

The second day, the convention nominated and chose a presidential and a vice presidential candidate.

THE PRESIDENT; THE FIRST LADY

Students know him, quite simply, as President Baker.

When visiting a dormitory, watching a football game or walking on campus he hails many students by their names, often stops to exchange greetings.

Students have cultivated a warm respect for the President. They know that despite his many duties as an administrator he still has time to be a friend.

Duties call him to travel . . . recent trips have taken the President to Colombia and Nigeria. The U. S. State Department frequently asks his expert advice.

President and Mrs. Baker enjoy receiving distinguished guests . . . entertainers, U.N. and State Department officials, educators, foreign visitors.

As an educator, the President pleads for quality in American education.

Warmness, sincerity and devotion to duty . . . President John C. Baker.

The President's wife . . . always a genial hostess.

Mrs. Baker is equally at home in the kitchen preparing sandwiches for visitors.

While attempting to serve a large, progressive university and to promote respect for the school, President John C. Baker is determined not to lose contact with the most important person in the university structure—the student.

With the able assistance of his charming wife Elizabeth, the President has established a rapport with the student body he serves. This contact is a mark of the successful university president.

The sandwich won't come too soon for Dr. Ralph Bunche. It's his favorite. The President spends a quiet moment with his guest while they wait.

There are those interludes for sewing in quiet solitude.

They are business men and women; their product is people. Papers and appointments and files fill their time in offices with always open doors. These are the duties of their jobs, the paperwork and recommending, the ordering of student life, the meetings on many levels to discuss and regulate and reprimand. But they serve beyond the duties. Their university is people.

It may be in a prearranged appointment or in a speech to many or the counsel to a group they advise. The words they say may not be said to one, but many, and serve as inspiration to the one who hears. A smile, a hello, an answer to a confidential or an organizational or an academic problem . . . these are the above and beyond-the-call duties.

ARTISTS FILLED THE CONCERT STAGE

Photos by The Staff
Copy by Dick Feagler

With a voice sultry and resonant, Marion Anderson charms.

Barriers built by the minds of small men fall before artistry.

The mementos last after the curtain has fallen.

The thunderous applause of a packed auditorium—the end of a magical evening.

Those with the velvet voices sprawl in the staging area, ready for the attack.

Singing is a serious business. Singing a whole opera freys the vocal chords.

Figaro expostulates to Susanna. A spirit of high comedy prevailed.

Technical difficulties nearly prevented the opera from occurring. But the show went on—masterfully.

Milstein and the violin were one. The music flowed with bubbling verve.

When a great artist walks from the wings, his presence commands the entire hall. His talent is there like a physical entity, poised and ready to captivate an audience. Nathan Milstein and Byron Janus played concerts at Ohio University during the fall semester. The audience, drawn to the hall by the fame of the artists soon discovered the substance upon which that fame is based. Milstein played with a flawless carelessness, his easy manner belying the technical perfection of his art. Janus committed himself intensely to his instrument, commanding the full range and scope of the piano's power. The Crowds sat in rapt attention. They responded with spontaneous applause.

Janus attacked the piano, subdued it fiercely and made it respond to his interpretation.

The music swells climatically and dies. The spell breaks.

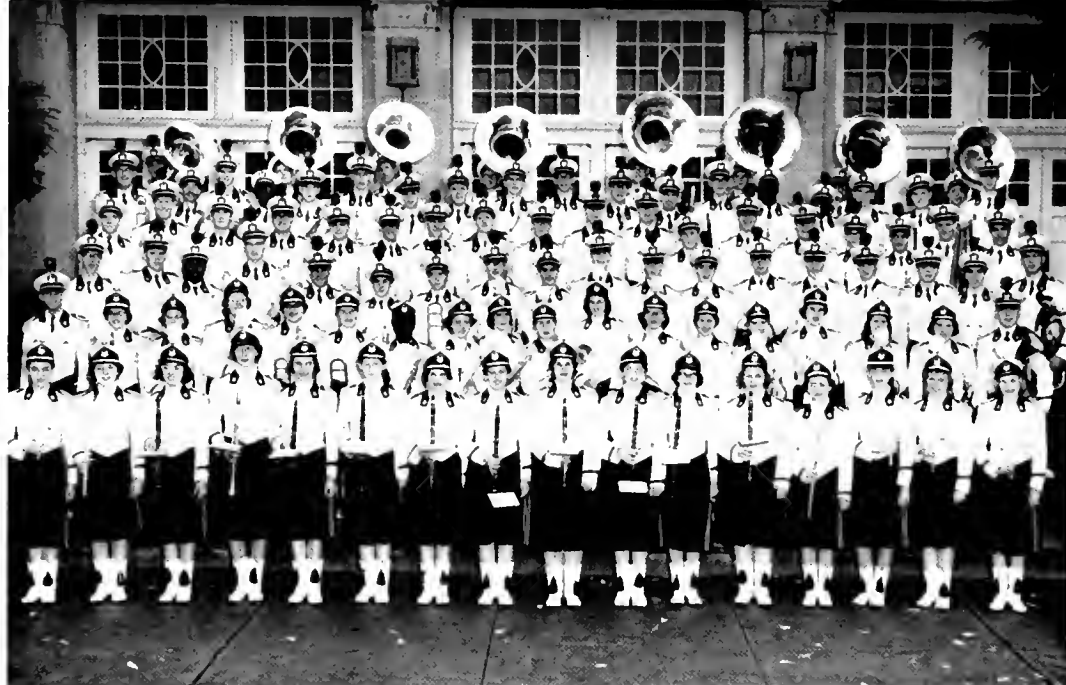

A new addition to the OU Chorus was a group called the "Singers."

Twenty students were selected and organized to sing specially arranged music at many of the programs given by the chorus. At the Christmas Convocation, a backdrop was used to add the spirit of Christmas to the chorus' program. The Chorus sang at the Ralph Bunche convocation. In the spring, they presented Bach's Magnificate at ou chorus

Memorial Auditorium. Students of any rank were eligible to become a member of the Chorus, which had approximately 100 members. It is recognized as both an academic and extra-curricular activity.

An opportunity to travel, make friends and work with students who share an interest in music are all a part of being a band member. The band plays at all home football games and the pep rallies, and migrates on Migration Weekend. The band divides into two groups—the concert band and the activities band.

The concert band takes a three-day tour to Ohio high schools, presents a winter concert and entertains at the Concert Under The Elms during the spring. The activities band plays at home basketball games and both bands combine for Varsity Show.

OU concert goers were entertained by the Ohio University Symphony Orchestra at Concerts throughout the year. Dr. Karl Ahrendt served as director for the orchestra. They played at the President's Convocation—and the freshmen were given their introduction to what OU could offer musically. They joined with other music groups in presentation of the Christmas Convocation. The orchestra members were saddened by the death of Ernst von Dohnanyi, the composer who has visited Ohio University for twelve years to conduct classes in piano, composition and chamber music.

The Ohio University Men's Glee Club met on Tuesday and Thursday for practice for presentation of year round musical entertainment for the campus. "It's A Grand Night For Singing" was the theme when the group presented a pop concert in April. The program was filled with show tunes. As a result of this performance they were able to pay for their newly acquired uniforms. The Men's group united with the Women's Glee Club to present the annual Christmas Concert, and in the spring, they moved outdoors to take part in the Concerts Under the Elms.

A combination of genuine interest, musical appreciation and hard work brought well-earned reward to the OU Women's Glee Club and all who heard it this year.

childhood education club

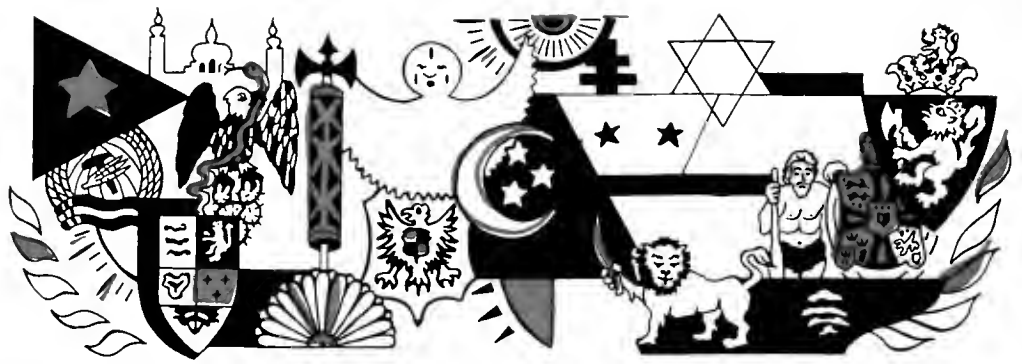

The Childhood Education Club provided opportunities for its members to achieve professional improvement and enjoy professional fellowship. Composed mainly of future teachers, the club provides a medium through which its members may exchange ideas and experiences, make contacts and promote better social and educational opportunities for children. Speakers gave their views during the year on education. Four members attended a national conference for teachers from all over the United States. Practical experience was gained when members proctored the study table at the Athens Children Home. Books were given to the children at Christmas.

The Ohio Student Education Association united elementary education majors, instilling professional quality. Panels, movies, speakers—all helped students to see the problems to be faced in actual teaching, and the way to resolve them. Membership entitled OSEA members to membership in The Ohio Education Association and the National Education Association. Education periodicals were sent to the members. These organizations were dedicated to raising the standards of the profession and keeping education on a high level. OSEA acted as host for the Ohio History Exam, showing the participating high school students around the Ohio University campus.

To stimulate interest in Germany and in the German language is the purpose of this group, which annually holds a hike-picnic, following trees marked in German, eating and drinking German food and beverage. Slides, films and discussions on the culture, education, politics and geography of the country are part of the regular meetings. At Christmas the club learned of Advent customs, heard the Christmas story in German and caroled in the language that had brought them together.

The members of this French Club spent a busy year—learning French folk songs and dances and learning of France's culture, customs, sports, literature, art and government. A one-act French comedy, "Service d'Ami," was presented at one meeting, and another featured a talk by the group's adviser about the French Underground during World War II.

At the International Club's program on France, the group sang French songs.

Students who wanted to improve Russian conversation and learn more of the Russian people attended the Russian Language Club. A professor of Russian told of his experiences as an interpreter at a Soviet-American tract meet, and a student of Russian descent discussed the religion and traditions of Russia. Members had unlimited use of the rifle range under the stadium. Here they learned correct handling of the rifle and worked to improve their marksmanship. Although few organized meetings are held, members become well acquainted through informal gatherings at the range.

Members of the Dolphin Club were chosen at the beginning of the semester, and from then until Mother's Weekend in May, many hours were spent in perfecting various synchronized swimming skills and in creating a show for the mothers. This year the show was "Dolphins Select the Best" —and select the best they did: the best clown, the best swan, and the best Moms to give the show for.

Finnettes is the girls swimming club which serves as a training ground for entrance into Dolphins. The group put on one routine at the Water Show in the spring. Membership was determined by skill in passing swimming ability tests, and the year was spent in synchronized swimming practice.

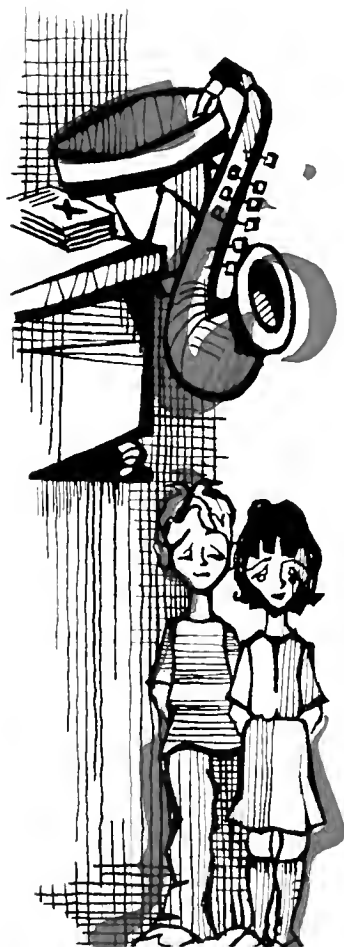

Uniting those with a sincere interest in creative dance. The group presented demonstrations of modern dance to faculty and student groups, danced at the International Fair representing America, and appeared on a Fine Arts TV lecture on dance. The Spring Concert was held twice in Ewing Auditorium—the proceeds sending a member to summer dance camp.

At Ohio University, Circle K was synonymous with service. The club brought the "Juvenile Six Plus One" from Dayton for a dixieland jazz concert to build their scholarship fund. On Odd Jobs Day, members did everything from hanging pictures to raking leaves to raise money to further Athens' youth activities. They conducted many of the campus elections and marshalled at the Christmas caroling. The club entertained the children of the Athens Children's Home.

Both the men and the children enjoyed the party given by the Circle K Club, an affiliate of Kiwanis International and Circle K International.

klub siella

Earth Science Club members explore the history of the earth as recorded in rocks through field trips, lectures, discussions and films. This year particular attention has been given to oil, and new and exciting developments in an old field. A newsletter was sent to graduates telling of the activities of alumni and recent developments in the field of geology.

Klub Siello, derived from the "klebsiello," a microscopic organism, united junior and sophomore women majoring in medical technology. Programs are planned to promote greater interest in this vocation and give the women a better understanding of it. Club members made trips to hospitals and clinics to see technicians at work.

ou chemistry society

An interest in chemistry is the only prerequisite for membership in the Chem Club. Their purpose is to introduce students to new and important fields of chemistry, promote fellowship, stimulate the exchange of ideas and encourage chemical research.

Common interest created and bound this group of scientists together. They were aware of experiments being performed within their meeting place, Super Hall. They never forgot that a "fact" is an observation which can be repeated under specified conditions. Field trips showed them the practical side of their career and speakers told of more.

professional engineers

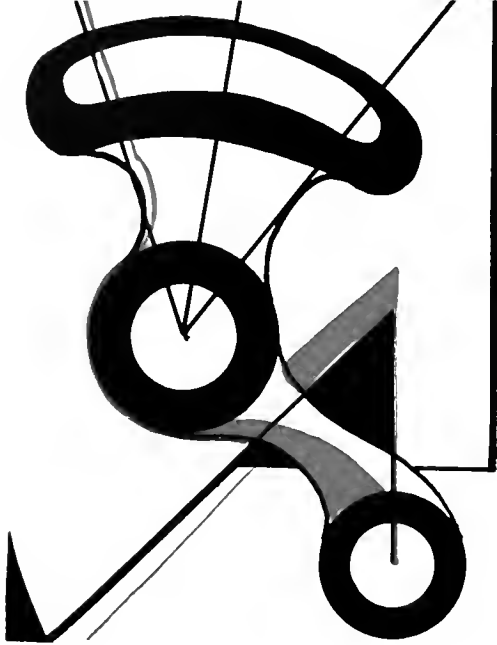

The Ohio Society of Professional Engineers united engineering students in striving to enrich their college lives. It was founded on the Ohio University campus in 1943. Professional ethics and professional attitudes are instilled by the group.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers meet in professional fellowship and collective understanding of today's rapidly changing technical world. Modern study and techniques are the topic of many discussions as they meet and plan activities to further their knowledge and practical experience in their chosen career.

He and his wife were killed in an auto accident leaving three children, ages 4, 3 and 1. The fund will aid in their education. Contributions are for the Ohio University Fund, Lash Memorial. At each meeting of the group, there was a movie or speaker—consulting engineers, men from industry, or students working on special projects. Exchange dinners were held with the Ohio State chapter in the spring and fall. ASCE members acted as hosts at the Engineering Open House.

A dual organization uniting engineers, The American Institute of Electrical Engineering-Institute of Radio Engineers, met monthly to hear professional speakers. The students traveled to Cincinnati to a student AIEE meeting. The men observed a power plant in operation at the Muskingham Generating Station and took another field trip to North American Aviation in the spring. A joint dinner meeting was held with the Ohio State Chapter. The group participated in OU's engineering open house, and a committee studied the possibility of setting up an engineering library, to be located in the Engineering Building.

The almost new Society of Chemical Engineers was founded a year ago as an extra-curricular activity that would at the same time provide members with practical knowledge about chemical engineering.

After two years, the group hopes to be nationally affiliated. Their activities this year included a speech by a Bell Telephone representative and a field trip to the DuPont Chemical Company.

camera club

The camera club consisted of a group of students who were all interested in a common thing—photography. Many photo majors join the club to gain the use of the photo lab on Saturday afternoons, one of the club's main advantages. The club had charge of supplying the towels to the photo lab from which they conceivably could make a slight profit—they didn't! Members of the club took a photo of each child in the Athens Children's home so they might have them to give to relatives or friends for Christmas. The club also had a Christmas party for faculty guests, members and their guests.

The Fine Arts Studio was a clutter of paint, pencils, T-squares and empty coffee cups. There was laughter, smoke and good-natured criticism as twenty members of the Student Chapter of the American Institute of Architecture worked late into the night on projects for an exhibit at the Center. Plans and models of the semester's work were shown. They designed a post office and a shopping center for Athens and suggested housing for the university.

The group sent delegates to a student forum in Washington and a convention for the Great Lakes region student chapters. The delegates gained an insight into architecture and met some of the nation's top architects. Field trips to Carborundum Company in Logan and Columbus and Southern Electric Company were taken with the Civil Engineering Society. The Finance Club acquaints its members with the opportunities, benefits and responsibilities that one might face in a financial career. Freshmen and sophomores interested in journalism became acquainted with OU's campus journalism activities and learned about the newspaper profession through the Student Press Club. Guest speakers from all phases of the mass communications writing field spoke to the group, including members of the OU Post staff, WOUB and the Athens Messenger. For the student interested in the field, with high school or on-the-job experience, the club offered ways to put journalistic talent to work at OU.

Helping students who are preparing to go into business to gain knowledge of all phases of management and increasing interest in its advancement—these are the goals of the Society for the Advancement of Management. Members include students interested in public relations, advertising, management and related areas of business. During the year members heard speeches given by industrial, engineering and public relations personnel. Through plant tours to Ohio and West Virginia, the members came into contact with local business and management operation. Ideas were shared and questions answered in panel discussions. An Interviewing Clinic, open to seniors, enabled them to become acquainted with the methods and procedures of interviews. Representatives of SAM attended two national conferences in New York. SAM members also published "The Quest," a newsletter.

the members of Alpha Phi Omega. During their affiliation with the blue and gold of the fraternity, these men are developing a sense of leadership and service. Thirty-five members are dedicated to service for campus, community and nation.

Recognized as a social club in 1959, members of Kappa Psi Phi have been working to establish national affiliation with Kappa Alpha Psi. Kappa-Kade, an all-campus Halloween costume party, provided the Athens County Children's Home with plenty of sweets, for the admission charge was a small sack of candy. In March, the men sponsored the Scholarship Recognition Tea for Negro students with averages above 3.0. Certificates were awarded to these students and a plaque was given for the highest average. A Sweetheart was chosen at the spring Sweetheart Formal and the men's mothers were honored with a breakfast and a tea.

vets' club

The Veterans' Club of Ohio University was originated to bring together student men with similar interests and backgrounds who have served in one of the military forces. Exchange of "war stories" is always a basis of promotion of this fellowship, from which many spontaneous parties arise. Friendship bonds are tightened by participation in intramural sports. Strengthening their patriotism, the men made a trip to Chillicothe's Veteran Hospital to the Veteran's Club and entertained the patients. This trip was made early in November to commemorate Veterans' Day.

GREEK WEEK CELEBRATES FRATERNALISM

Photos by The Staff

Copy by Mike Tressler

An Open House at the Kappa Delta house honors Miss Sorority and Mr. Fraternity. For this week they belonged to all Greeks.

This is Greek Week, planned by and for Ohio University's Greeks. If you are a Greek, it's your week.

For OU's sometimes struggling Greek system, it's a chance to show what it can do, what it has to offer. For each one of the eighteen fraternities and twelve sororities on the campus it's the chance to compete with each other and work together at the same time.

Greeks work hard for Greek Week. When it comes, with its many time-filling events, it's tiring . . . but rewarding.

The trophies, the awards, the recognition, the fun of working with other fraternity men and sorority women are all part of the satisfaction and pride of saying, "I'm a Greek."

The royal couple, Sally Lynn and Al Smelko, visit field events.

Runners from each fraternity carry in their banners at the end of the torch run, the beginning of Greek Week.

The torch is lit; Greek Week begins.

The candidates for "Mr. Fraternity" wait to be interviewed.

Another candidate for "Mr. Fraternity" is introduced and interviewed before a mostly-Greek audience at Mem. Aud.

Fraternities and sororities ready their booths for the carnival.

The barker drums up business.

A clown gets special attention, laughter.

The Greek Week Dance is the end of a long week.

The thirty-mile torch run, a traditional symbol of the Greek ideal, begins Greek Week.

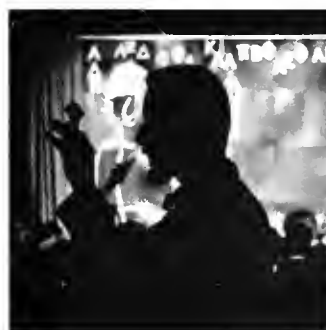

At the carnival, the Greeks compete for prizes for booths and barkers. There they meet their king and queen for the first time.

The picnic and the comic field day where the farcical games make every fraternity man an Olympian, draw the Greeks together again.

Several convocations remind the fraternity and sorority people of their ideals, goals and responsibilities. Small panel discussions give the Greeks a chance to communicate with the non-Greeks. The week is ended with the dance at the Center.

Greeks meet non-Greeks in an informal rush panel.

Greeks dance to Larry Elgart's orchestra.

Mr. and Miss Greek reign at the Greek Week Convocation, just one of several events which brought OU Greeks together during the week.

The perennial "Mr. Greek," George Starr Lasher, comes to the celebrations.

Frat "athletes" perform at comic field day.

The ADPi living room is the scene of a bridge game. It's the room that's really lived in by the sisters and their friends.

♦ alpha delta pi

Located at a strategic corner of the campus, the sixty girls of Alpha Delta Pi always knew what was happening when. At Christmas they organized a party for Athens area children and nationally they saved a penny a day to be donated to under-privileged children. When plastic Easter lilies appeared in lapels, the campus knew the ADPi's were holding the Easter Lily Parade for the Athens Society for Crippled Children. Socially, the girls crowned a king at the Sweetheart Formal, and "Peanuts For Petunia" captured third place at the Greek Week Carnival. Founder's Day in May celebrated the beginning of the oldest sorority in the United States.

Pledges learn the traditional AEPHI songs.

Awaiting the AEPHI's as they returned to Athens was a new house-mother. Some of the actives attended Alpha Epsilon Phi's National Convention held at Sun Valley, Idaho. The trip was not in vain, for they returned with two trophies: one for clever skits and the other for cooperation. Visits to the Athens Children's Home, with gifts and entertainment, and helping the retarded at Beacon School in Athens are two of the philanthropic projects in which the AEPHI's participate. At the pledge-active baseball game last spring, the actives trounced the pledges, 13-0. Retaliation was in store. When it came time for the pledges to pay their dues, they paid in pennies! It took the actives three days to total them.

Greek Week found the Alpha Xi president named to the Miss Sorority Court and the "Fuzzy Quaker" barked her way to victory at the Carnival. Six live ducks used to "Ring A Duck, Win A Fuzzy" escaped in the house the night before Carnival. A wild duck chase followed! Honorary Fuzzies were initiated twice during the year to reward the men helping with J-Prom and Homecoming. Like regular pledges—big sisters and all—they wore toothbrushes and ribbons for three days.

The president hostesses at the Chi O art show.

The Chi O's are busy girls! They started the year with cider and doughnuts and a swingin' comba at the Barn Party. At the end of the first semester, those who had reached their goal in grades ate well at the Steak and Beans Dinner. Those who didn't ate beans. The busboys were thanked when the girls did a turnabout and served them at the "Waiters' Dinner." They also surprised the Pi Phis with breakfast at 6 o'clock in the morning. First semester they supported an Athens family, and adopted a ward at the State Hospital, entertaining them with a style show and party.

Pledges entertain actives with an original Christmas skit.

The Kappa Deltas had a busy summer as well as a crowded school year. With paintbrushes in hand and KD songs in the air, the girls helped redecorate their house. Greek Week Open House was held to honor the royalty, and the KD Carnival booth won second. The winner of the Teke-KD football game won a trophy and the girls were confident—besides the fellows had to run backwards! Another honor came at Siglympics, when the girls won the first place trophy. The pledges took over the house for the Pledge Christmas Dance and remembering the serious side of sorority life, the girls invited children from the Children's Home to a Christmas party complete with Santa and presents. Twenty-four pledges were "inspired" to wear KD beanies during White Rose Week.

The KDs return triumphantly after capturing the Siglympics trophy.

Surprise breakfasts and a Turnabout Day for the pledges drew them into the Phi Mu circle. At a poem and paddle party each pledge gave her big sister a paddle and a specially written verse. To acquaint the pledges with life in the house the actives kept a record of happenings to be read weekly at Castle Hour. Service-wise the Phi Mus made and collected toys to fill toy carts for the Children's Home. In March the Founder's Day Banquet commemorates the

The Pi Beta Phis entertain the faculty at a tea in their honor.

The first national fraternity for college women, Pi Beta Phi, was also the first sorority on the Ohio University campus. The Pi Phis are known for their exciting and original parties. Not the least of these was the "Heaven and Hell" Rush Party for which the house was decorated in a variety of red. A memorial service was held for the old Beta house, which was torn down. The Pi Phis, dressed in black, gathered at the house and played taps. The end of the winter found the girls working busily on plans for the Spring Formal held on the Pi Phi patio.

Popcorn stringers prepare to trim.

The third largest national sorority since its recent merger with Pi Kappa Sigma, Sigma Kappa began the year with the Cider Chug after the first football game to honor the team. Chuggers enjoyed cider, doughnuts and music in the backyard. Proceeds went to the girls' adopted cottage at Athens State Hospital, for whom the girls planned parties during the year. The project was voted the best national Sigma Kappa gerontology project. New pledges were honored at the Turkey Flip. Big and little sisters exchanged gifts when the girls spent the night at the house before Christmas vacation. A Sigma Kappa Sweetheart was chosen at the Spring Formal. The upstairs at the house was given a new look when the rooms were decorated according to the tastes of those who lived there.

It's date night, and the mirrors are busy.

It was said that the prerequisite for living at the Theta Phi Alpha house was playing bridge. The porch and living room were usually filled in the afternoon with bridge-players. During rush the Theta Phis planned a South Sea Cruise Party and designed a palm tree to add to the effect. They stored the tree under the back porch, and discovered at party time that the rubbish men had carried it away!

In the spring the Sweetie Pie of Theta Phi was crowned and presented with a trophy. During finals, each little sister received one white rose with a note from her big sister.

A new housemother graced the Theta Phi house with Southern hospitality.

zeta tau alpha

The Zeta King is crowned.

Unity through competition was their motto.

The girls of Zeta Tau Alpha competed gradewise, and tug-of-war wise, with the winners not so wet as the losers they pulled into the asylum pond. One weekend the pledges moved in and sent the actives to the dorms. They threw a turn-about day—their one chance to "live"! A few weeks later the pledges could be found at the house in burlap bags, in class in blue and gray outfits; and then came initiation. Not everything was competition. Together the pledges and actives enjoyed the Stardust Formal where they elected and crowned the Zeta King, a picnic and a Christmas party for less fortunates.

Autumn found the sisters of Kappa Alpha Alpha preparing for their invitational party. At Christmas the girls contributed their time and service to the Athens Children's Home. A pledge party at the WRA cabin started second semester activities. During the winter the girls took part in the intramural sports program and when spring came they could be found at the baseball field where they challenged their brother fraternity, Alpha Phi Alpha, to the baseball championship. Since the girls set up the rules they managed to maintain the title! "Mom" was honored on Mother's Weekend with a luncheon. The sorority worked toward the goal of affiliating with the national interracial Alpha Kappa Alpha.

The last practice polishes KAAs carols to perfection.

Interfraternity Pledge Council provides the president of the pledge classes of each of the nineteen fraternities with administrative, cooperative and representative experience. They are active in campus functions to work with other fraternity men. IFPC is independent of Interfraternity Council, supporting itself through dues that each pledge class pays. Each year they investigate a pledge project. At Christmas they gave trees and decorations to two needy families in the Athens area.

The women of Jr. Pan Hellenic Council were united to discuss and project unity among the sororities they represent. Made up of the presidents of each pledge class the group chose a work project each semester designed to teach the philosophy of working together to the women who have pledged themselves to Greek life during their college years.

The president and one elected member of each of the twelve Greek letter sororities on campus compose the Pan Hellenic Council. In sharing ideas, planning services, fostering friendship and gaining cooperation, the council follows the Pan Hellenic Creed: "We, the fraternity women of America, stand for preparation for service through character building inspired in the close contact and deep friendship of fraternity life. To us, fraternity life is not the enjoyment of special privileges, but an opportunity to prepare for wide and wise human service."

Besides representing individual fraternal bodies, the council functions as a whole in supporting several welfare projects. A board scholarship for a foreign student is included among the services of Pan Hel. The girl chosen eats with each sorority for several weeks. The council also assists in the Foster Parent Plan which supports a Korean War orphan. Through these efforts, Pan Hel serves as the binding force of understanding among the individual sororities at OU.

Operating under a new representative system, Interfraternity Council carried out its job of coordinating the activities and government of the nineteen fraternities on the OU campus. The system, which placed a man other than the fraternity president on the council, removed much from the president's shoulders. IFC sponsored a German exchange student for the second year. He dined with each fraternity for a designated "To strengthen the ties of fraternity" is the purpose of Acacia, whose motto is "human service." Nationalized in 1949, the men celebrated by playing host on the tenth Founder's Weekend. The word national applies in another way, for last spring the Acacias set a national record for car-stuffing by crowding thirty-two men in a Volkswagen. The Sweetheart Formal was held in February. In April the Hocking was renamed the Nile as the Acacias and their dates dress in costumes of ancient Egypt for the "Night On the Nile" party. Slaves, mummies, Cleopatra and even the Great Sphinx appeared. Remodeling plans are in the future!

In 1960 the Alpha Phi Alphas ended their fortieth year on OU's campus. Important fall events were a welcoming tea for new men on campus and the Winter Formal. A small fraternity, the Alphas participate in only a few intramural sports but excel in them. Since the Alphas have no house, they hold a weekly gathering at one of the married brothers' homes. After the important business has been finished Phi Chapter turns to the more enjoyable business of a poker game, a swinging record or a good joke.

A relaxed Delt quartet entertains rushees.

The Delta Tau Delta fraternity urged the OU football team to sew up another victory at Homecoming with their giant sewing machine. Happy smiles were to be seen on each child's face when the Delts held a Christmas party for the children at the orphanage, complete with Santa. Regatta participants worked in pairs to build "boats" which they raced from the old mill to the Richland Bridge. If there were any dry boaters by the time they reached the bridge, the spectators made sure they went home wet—they dropped water balloons on them from the bridge. The 1959-60 social calendar was well-marked with the Gay 90's Party, the Circus Party and the Shipwreck Party sparking the season.

Compus talent provided the entertainment at the Lambda Chi's night club party in its realistic setting. The Apoche party created a French Riviera atmosphere with the brothers and their dates in French costume. At the Crescent Ball in the spring, the Crescent Girl was crowned from among the pinmates and fiancées. Cribbage provided leisure-time pleasure. At Christmas each brother and his date "adopted" a child from the county home. At a party at the house each "family" gave their child presents. Ringing the bell for the Salvation Army collection was another Christmas duty. Lambda Chi carolers gave the traditional corols a new sound with the modern arranging of one of the brothers.

The thirty brothers in the Phi Delt house and annex made room for one more this year with the addition of the new mascot, a terrier who remained nameless. The Phi Delt started the year with two original events—a back-yard paint party and the annual funeral ceremony for one of the brothers. The paint party proved an easy way out of a painting job for the Phi Delt. All girls in university housing were invited to paint their names and crests on the walls of the house. The Funeral was not as solemn as mast, for the Phi Delt provided an unusual climax by having a marshmallow roast over the "departed" brother's newly-filled "grave."

With little over two months having elapsed in the fall semester, four new trophies glittered on the mantles of the Skull House and the stigma of amputation settled over the brotherhood. It seems that two of the trophies were presented minus arms and heads. A carnival booth, "Stairway to the Stars," complete with orbiting styrafoam satellites, a spaceman with a sales pitch, a brother mummified in toilet paper, all combined to make Greek Week a first-place accomplishment. An old-fashioned steamboat paddled itself to second place victory and the Skulls entertained visiting alumni during a rainy, but spirited Homecoming celebration. The annual Greek Invitational Bridge Tournament, the crowning of a new sweetheart at the Black and Gold formal, J-Prom song and dance, and antics of the spring pledge class highlighted another year for the brothers of the Maltese Cross.

The Phi Tau year began with a combination of polishing the newly won ODK Torch Sing trophy and the All-Fraternity softball championship trophy. For the second year no one managed to cross the Phi Tau goal line, giving them the All-Fraternity football championship. Another Phi Tau championship was won in the men's division of the Homecoming floats. A large papier-mache skunk and the theme, "We Smell a Victory," made up their prize-winning float. Among their numerous theme parties were a South Sea Island Party, a Beatnik Party, a Bowery Brawl, and a Kindergarten Party at which hopscotch and marbles were the main events of the evening. Scholarship, fellowship and sportsmanship are emphasized plus an additional reminder that the door is always open to a friend.

Last year Phi Kappa Fraternity celebrated its 70th and last anniversary as a national fraternity. This year was the first anniversary of a new national fraternity and of a new name for an old group on campus. The new name, Phi Kappa Theta, came about through a merger of two national fraternities, Phi Kappa and Theta Kappa Phi. The merger enabled the Phi Kaps to build up their national organization to a total of sixty chapters and six colonies. Changes were made in the fraternity's pin, colors, pledge book ritual and rushing, but traditions remain and to OU students the 30 year old Psi Chapter is still Phi Kappa. The Phi Kaps worked hard on scholarship, social affairs and intramural activities to give them a year full of fun and fraternal fellowship.

During the summer, an annex housing twenty-five more men was built on the back of the Phi Sigma Delta house. The Phi Sigs added the finishing touches. Pledges were kept busy painting, landscaping and moving appliances for the new kitchen. An official housewarming was held during Homecoming Weekend. The Phi Sig Speakeasy was the first fall party. Flappers, sheiks, gun-molls and gangsters mobbed the house. Hay and live chickens were moved in for the Farmer-in-the-Dell Party. Sports played a big role when the men won the all-fraternity and all-campus tennis championship. The "best pledge award" was given to a member of the class, which gave a Beatnik party for the actives. Spring brought the Phi Sigs Spring Weekend, which included the Formal and a Sunday brunch, and an outing at Lake Hope.

If it wasn't tennis, it was horse-play . . . leggo!

The familiar OU Bobcat and a loud clanging bell flanked by the Confederate flag were the Pi KA's contributions at all football games and pep rallies. A gathering of all "Beats" was held at the PiKA pad. A dinner honored the dean and assistant dean of men. A gay funeral party, beginning at the fraternity house and ending with the dropping of a casket from the large bridge, was held in February. All who attended wore black. Each semester the men held a steak-and-bean dinner to encourage scholastic endeavor. The unfortunates with below average grades dined on beans and water. The PiKA Dream Girl was selected at the formal dance, and the year's activity ended with an outing at Buck's Lake.

Snow White inspired the PiKA pledges to do a skit.

The strains of music coming from the Sigma Chi house this fall were from the practice sessions of the new Sig quartet ready to make its debut at the Varsity O Show. A few weeks later Greek Week started the year off right as the Sig booth took second place at the Carnival and their candidate was named Mr. Fraternity. At the close of the week OU students gathered at the soccer field to watch the battle for the Siglympics trophy.

The brothers who live at 9 Church are small in number but their ability to work together is great. The Tau Gam house is a busy place. A favorite hangout is the kitchen where the men don chef hats and proceed to whip up snacks most any time of the day. To take care of those extra calories, activities such as basketball and workouts on bar bells are stressed. On the social calendar the Tau Gams marked off February 14 as Founders'

Day and celebrated by having a Valentine Dance where they crowned their favorite sweetheart. Special attention was given to Fathers' and Mothers' Weekends.

Women's dorms, sororities, eight swim events, trophies and a buffet dinner for the swimmers formed the 12th Tekequacade sponsored by Alpha Beta chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon. The combination resulted in the winning women departing with individual, permanent and rotating trophies. Teke traditions continued with the Founder's Banquet in January when a national officer came to speak. BOBCAT CAGE TEAM ATTEMPTS TO PROVE EXPERTS WRONG

Copy by Ed Wright

At the start of the season, the so-called experts picked the Bobcat basketball team to have one of its poorest seasons in years, following the graduation of four of last year's starters.

But the cagers of Coach Jim Snyder started out the campaign to prove them wrong.

OU began the season strong, taking wins from three mid-west independents—West Virginia Wesleyan, Marietta and Morehead. The win was Ohio's first on the Eagle floor.

The Bobcats were stale against Indiana in dropping their first game of the year, 89-68.

They stayed this way against DePaul, taking it on the chin 77-54.

Ohio came somewhat back to life against seventh-ranked Illinois.

The Bobcats surprised the Illini by almost overcoming a large lead. OU lost 85-79.

On a tedious road trip just before the holidays, the Bobcats met two Big Ten title contenders and one powerful midwestern squad within only one week.

All three squads were ranked among the top twenty in the nation.

Bobcat captain Dale Bandy holds off all comers against the Wesleyan team.

Handicapped shots are frequent in basketball.

The Bobcats ran their losing streak to four games when Mid-American favorite Toledo used strong defense in defeating OU, 63-53. This, however, was the end of the cold spell.

The Snydermen began to utilize the experience they had gained against rough opposition and improved with every game. OU began to win on the road as well as at home, something previous Bobcat cage teams found difficult.

Soon, the Bobcats found themselves tied for the league lead with Toledo. Both clubs had 8-1 records. Ohio captured one of its greatest wins in the MAC ever when it defeated the Rockets, 71-67, before 3,000 partisan fans at Men's Gym.

Pennant fever swept the OU campus like the plague. Everywhere, students had large hopes that the Bobcats would win the league crown. The "Cinderella" Bobcats did just that five days later with a win over Bowling Green coupled with a Miami victory over Toledo.

A worm's eye view of the proceedings is gained by an opponent.

At the NCAA tournament game in Lexington, OU came from behind in the last half to upset Notre Dame, 74-66. At Louisville, the Bobcats blew halftime leads to lose to eight-ranked Georgia Tech, 57-54, and Western Kentucky, 97-87. For his outstanding rebounding, Howard Jolliff was named a unanimous choice for the all-tourney team.

After finishing with a 17-8 record, the Bobcats for 1959-60, the team that fooled the experts, had to go down as the best in almost 20 years.

For the second straight year, the wrestling squad did not finish above .500.

This fine showing was followed quickly by wins over Miami and Ball State.

ICERS WIN CROWN AFTER SECOND YEAR

To mature from an infant into an adult in three short years is quite an achievement.

Starting in 1958 in the yet unfinished skating rink, Coach John McComb began preparing a nucleus for his new powerful Bobcat skaters.

McComb, a graduate of Boston University, where he played soccer and hockey, wasn't expecting a miracle when the Bobcats joined the Ohio Intercollegiate Hockey Association in 1959.

At present, seven collegiate teams, Ohio State, Denison, Fenn, Case, Ohio Northern, Dayton and OU, hold membership in the hockey association.

The Bobcats finished a strong second last season, losing only to first place Ohio State, 6-2. Completing their first full season, the skaters won six, tied two and lost one.

Talk spread fast around the OU campus. Ice hockey was fast, it was rough and it was exciting.

This season the skaters started off in the right direction, trouncing the first six opponents they faced.

Only three seniors, captain and defenseman Rick Jantz, defenseman Elmer Gackowski and veteran goalie Warren Wissman were on the roster. The number one line of Bing Carlson, Bob Simond and Bob Hayes and the number two line of Pete Worden, Dick Hendrie and Ron Hill powered the Bobcats to impressive loop wins over Dayton, 14-2; Denison, 16-1; Fenn, 19-1 and Case, 8-3.

They clobbered arch-rival Ohio State, 13-3, to clinch the conference crown.

With the help of the school administration, the Bobcats were outfitted with new uniforms. However, all supplies needed by the team during the season were purchased out of the money taken in at each home game.

Since many fans are unfamiliar with hockey rules and infractions, plans are being considered for a clinic where students can learn words like "icing the puck," "off-sides," and "face-off at the blue line."

But even the student who can't toss the lingo around can find himself excited by the game of hockey. Twelve men with flashing skates and flying sticks, a puck that slides at the rate of 90 mph at times and the resulting action don't let a watcher become bored.

The tempo moves from gliding, sweeping smoothness to crashing combat. Men slam into the sideboards, tempers flare quickly in the midst of a charge to the goal, the goalie goads them on with colorful shouts to his teammates.

There are cumbersome uniforms involved, padding and protectors and heavy leather gloves. There are frustrating minutes in a penalty box watching the team play shorthanded.

It's a slashing, furious game, full of rough and tumble, skillful skating and a high degree of team cooperation. That's hockey!

A Bobcat skater breaks away to register another goal.

The chilly crowd is on its feet as the Bobcats prepare for a face-off.

Time out on the ice as the ref checks injury.

An Ohio defenseman glides down the ice to block a shot.

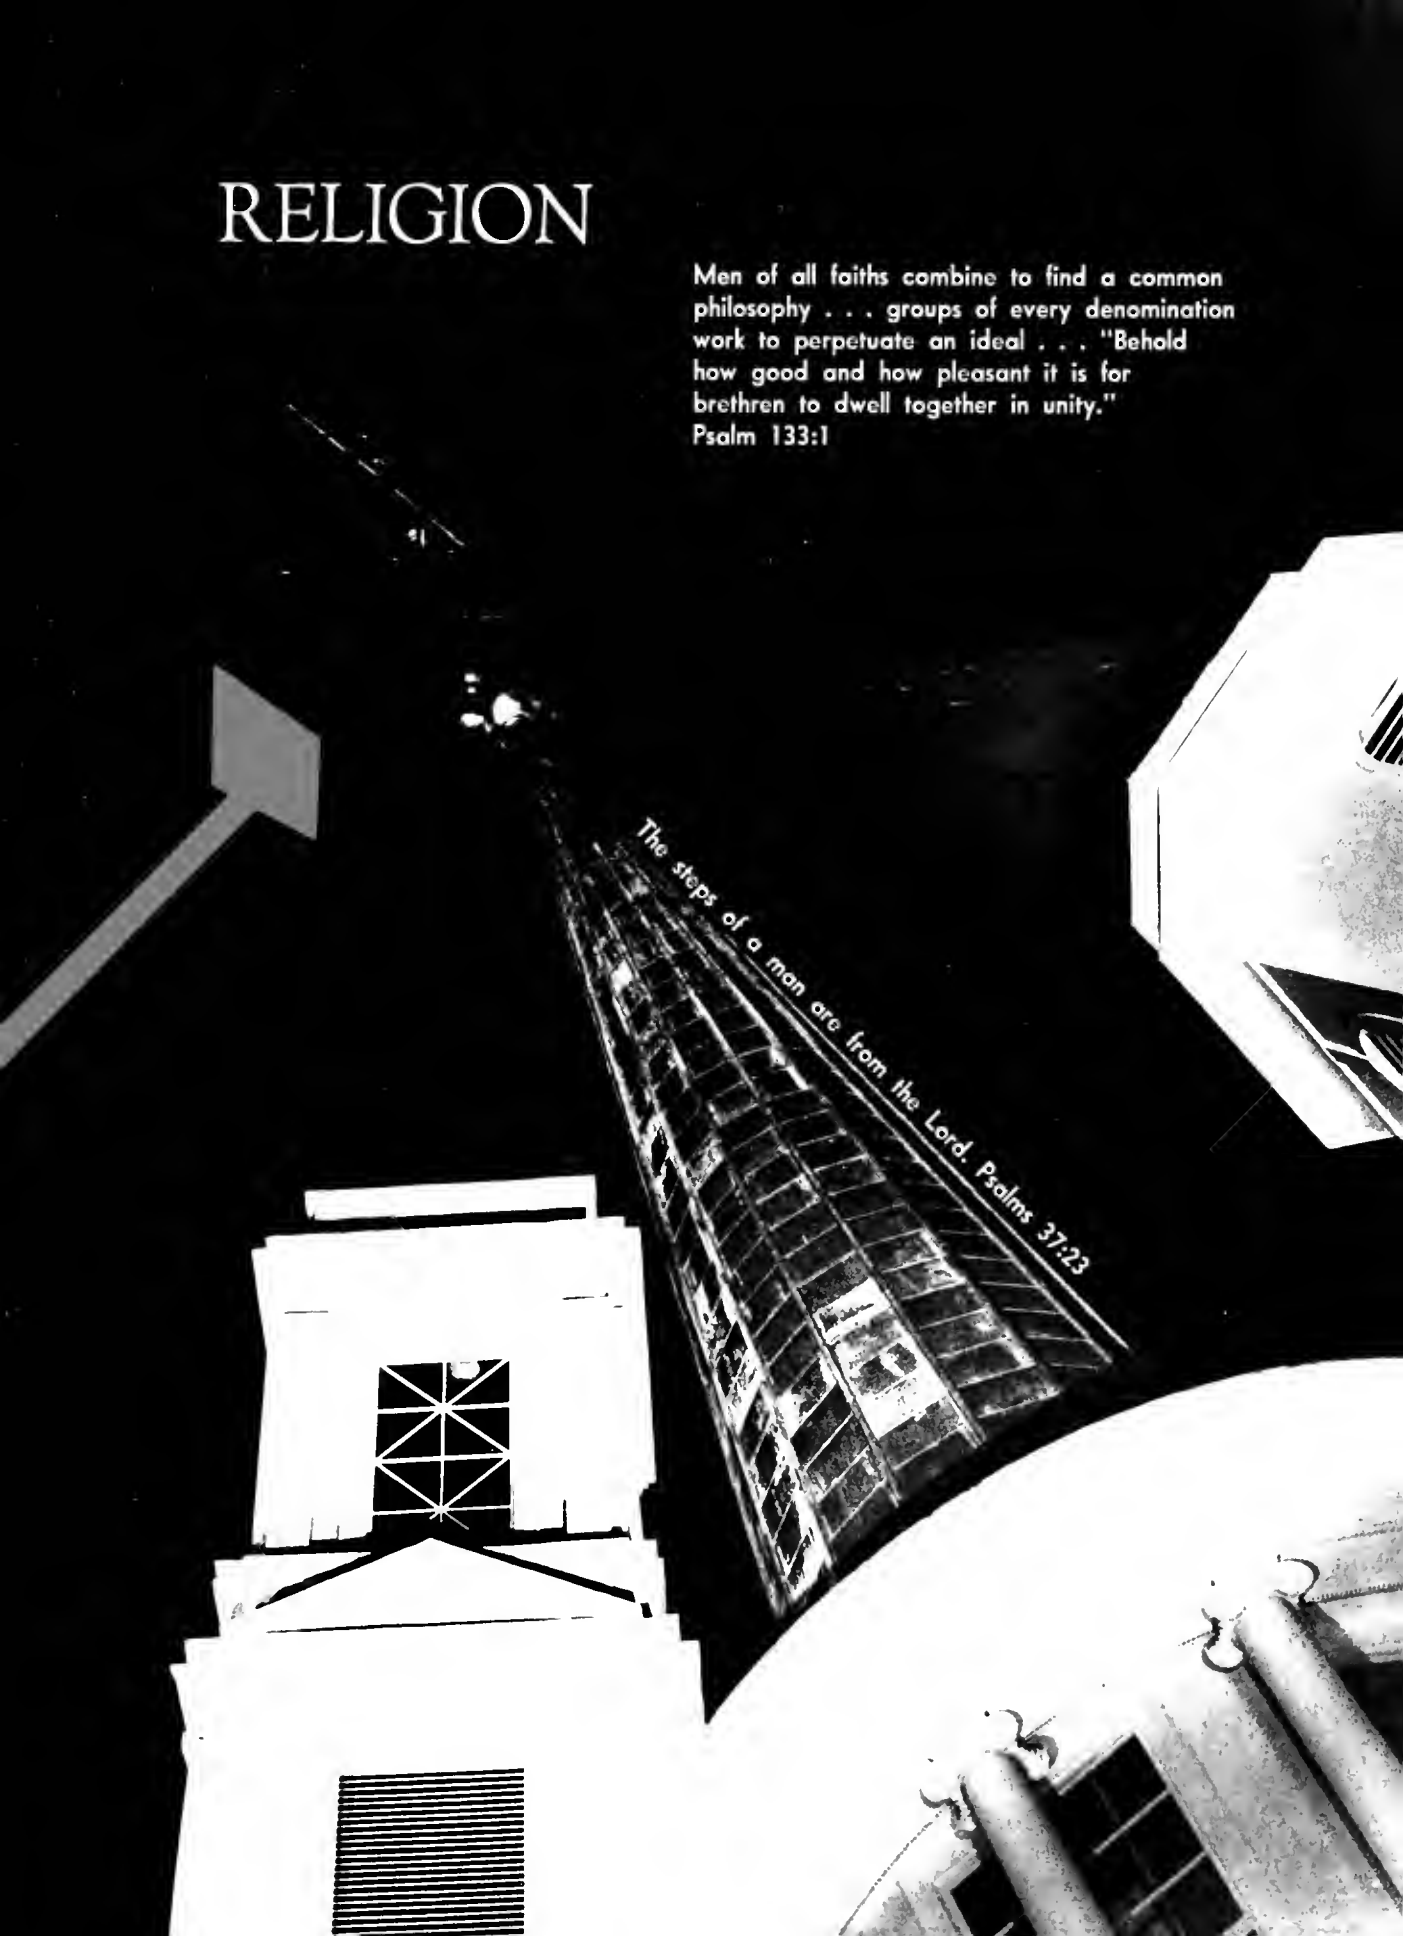

Fans, guys and gals alike, crowd the stands.

THE WORLD AT OU

Photos by Staff

Copy by Linda Boughman

People. Young people. Young people filled with aching concern. Concerned about the world they live in, about the country they will soon help govern, about the religion that they already are being called to witness for. They came to Ohio University from Colorado, Florida, the Philippines, California, Maine. They came together and almost the only thing they had in common was this terrible concern. Not all were Christians. Perhaps there were no Communists but every other ideology was present. Not all were White. The Black and the Red and the Yellow were represented. They listened to discussion of technological upheaval, modern secularism, displaced people and advanced education. They had to think.

The conference people arrived with spirit—Athens or bust.

Registration produced the usual pandemonium, but efficient mess.

Californians arrived at 3 a.m., had to sleep in Center lounge.

Bishop Newbigin gave the morning talks.

Nigerian, Britain, Texan, Indian, Chinese, Socialist, Capitalist, Colonialist—all had to speak, for they had this biting concern. Many had the courage to speak their beliefs. Some wondered at their strength to do this. Others wondered at their own lack of strength. They investigated missionary and service works to learn where they could give of their talents. There was this nagging concern. The conference ended. All that remained were a few student stewards and a few faculty who participated. And this undeniable concern.

African, European, Chinese, Indian, American spoke, prayed and studied together.

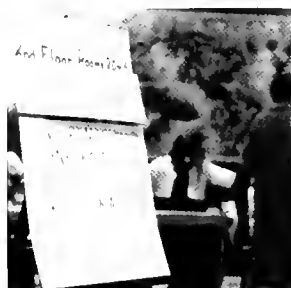

Delegates surround Martin Luther King.

The Frontier Room was the same as always, only with different people. OU students performed their usual jobs.

Always meetings, signs.

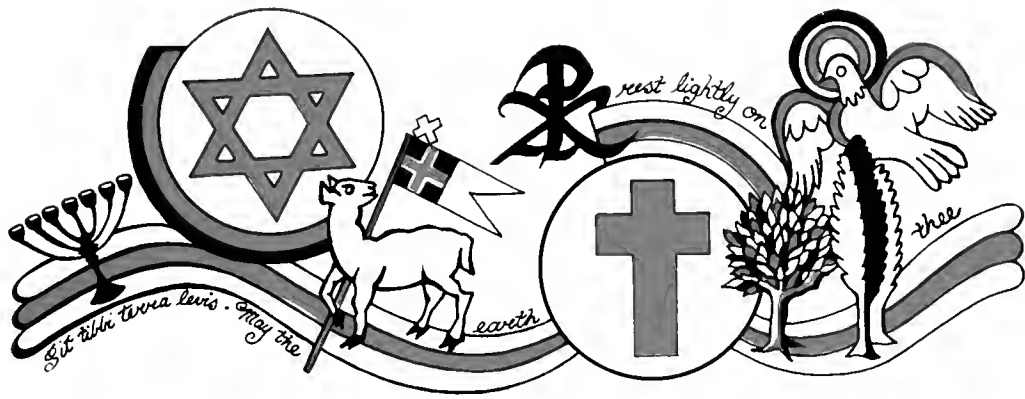

Communion brought fellowship.

Press conferences were arranged to let the rest of the world know what was happening; who said what when.

They left as they came, in a crowd.
But it was a crowd of individuals.

Members of Baptist Disciple Fellowship found they had hidden talents when they began working on projects this year. Everyone got into the act when the members painted and redecorated their student lounge. Suppers were prepared by the members twice a month. The members formed deputation teams to visit area churches in the spring and presented programs with the help of the various ministers. Methodist preference students on campus found Wesley Foundation offered them an opportunity for fun and fellowship, worship and service. Each person had something to offer Wesley and Wesley had something for them.

Sunday evening vespers were just one of the outward expressions of the central purpose of Wesley. Students gathered for snacks after the movies. There were Wednesday morning communion services, projects on Friday night, sports events attended together and participation in deputations of the church. Wesley served as the overall organization for Methodist students.

The other organizations related to the church were part of it. This year students contributed to buy a bus for use by all the organizations. They pledged a large sum to the Athens church to help retire the outstanding debt.

Drama and music were part of Wesley. The choir sang once a month at church and toured Ohio at Easter. Deputations to other churches and institutions near Athens taught service to others. Wesley Players, a group of students who enjoyed preparing and presenting religious drama, gave special ones of Christmas and Easter. During Holy Week they also toured Ohio giving appropriate presentations. At the Ohio Methodist Student Movement Convention in the spring, the players presented "Bo Thone." Much time and work was required to get the productions ready, but not all was solemnity. A contact party and other activities were part of the fun.

The men of Sigma Theta Epsilon found themselves united for many purposes. Central in that unity was a striving to join those of similar desires and feelings, and through this fellowship to experience service to others. Members worshiped together each week, gaining experience in leading and in following. They served the local church, and individually or as a group aided those persons who needed friendship and fellowship. On the lighter side they formed teams to represent them in the intramurals and they enjoyed social activities such as the Sweetheart Formal. The group printed a bulletin which kept its members informed of activities of the Students were able to express their religion when they went to the towns surrounding Athens to lead worship services. Various students were responsible for different parts of the service. Vespers were held every Sunday night. Afterward there were a series of discussions on non-Christian religions and other current issues of importance. The winter retreat was an informal fellowship around a campfire. Students'

Day of Prayer and Meditation was stressed. The Upper-Room Supper was a Communion service given during Easter to represent the Lord's Last Supper. With the Wesley Foundation, Westminster had a religious art show in the Center. A coffee forum was held to discuss the pictures with the art faculty.

The fifty actives and forty pledges of Phi Chi Delta, a Presbyterian sorority, kept busy while benefiting the campus and community. For their pledge project they planned discussions on various religions in the men's dorms on Sunday afternoons. Pledges and actives together worked on service projects such as reading to elderly people, making party favors for the state hospital each month, holding a clothes drive, and making favors at Easter for the Sheltering Arms Hospital. Of course, there were parties too, like the Bermuda Party in September, to help provide a wholesome social atmosphere. And so they worked for others while developing each member morally and spiritually.

Voicing their ideas and questions in Sunday night devotions and discussions, students sought to understand the Christian faith, the perspective of the Lutheran witness, Christian studentship, and to exercise this faith in relevant ways on campus and in the world.

They gathered used clothing for refugees. "LSAction" cash gifts strengthened the national work and publication of LSAA, and gave money to students in foreign colleges. Area meetings gave students from different campuses a chance to exchange their ideas.

The group's purpose is to help and encourage students in a religious manner in all problems—academic, social and individual. A lecture is sponsored each year on Christian Science, given by a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, and literature is made available to anyone.

The four year's energies of Father Joseph Gardner and the OU Newman Club members were satisfied when the Catholic Student Centre was opened. Students attend services there and all Newman Club activities are held there. It contains a chapel with collapsible pews, meeting rooms and a kitchen. Twentieth century architecture features red brick and stained glass. Newman's purpose is to provide a means of spiritual, moral, intellectual and social development of the Catholic student. Communion Breakfast were held once a month after mass, and speakers were invited to talk. On Father's Weekend, dads joined their children at the Communion Breakfast. A father of one of the students talked on the responsibility of Catholic parents who have children attending secular universities.

To lead students to a fuller realization in everyday living of the Christian faith through a program of worship, study and action is the goal of the YMCA. The organization of Christian men accomplished their purpose with an emphasis on action by doing many services for the community. The projects included trips to the Children's Home, and the adoption of five children from the home. Their "big brothers" took the children swimming, horse-back riding, and spent spare moments talking about happenings of the day. They provided men to take part in various church services in the Athens area. They organized basketball teams and provided coaches for the Hi-Y and Gro-Y in Athens.

The YM sponsored a public showing of the away Bobcat football games narrated by the varsity coaching staff. The YM worked together with the YWCA to plan an annual Thanksgiving service. Several members attended the Ecumenical Student Conference held at OU.

The aim of the Young Women's Christian Association is to help young women develop the charitable instincts of their characters and have fun doing it. They drove mentally retarded children from Beacon House to the Speech Building twice a week for speech therapy. The boys and girls of the Children's Home were also remembered at Halloween when Y-ers took them trick or treating, followed by a Y party. The children were not the only ones who received the YWCA's attention—the women at Athens State Hospital were given a party by Y members who passed out refreshments and provided the entertainment.

The prof is seen like this as day after day he shares with us his store of knowledge.

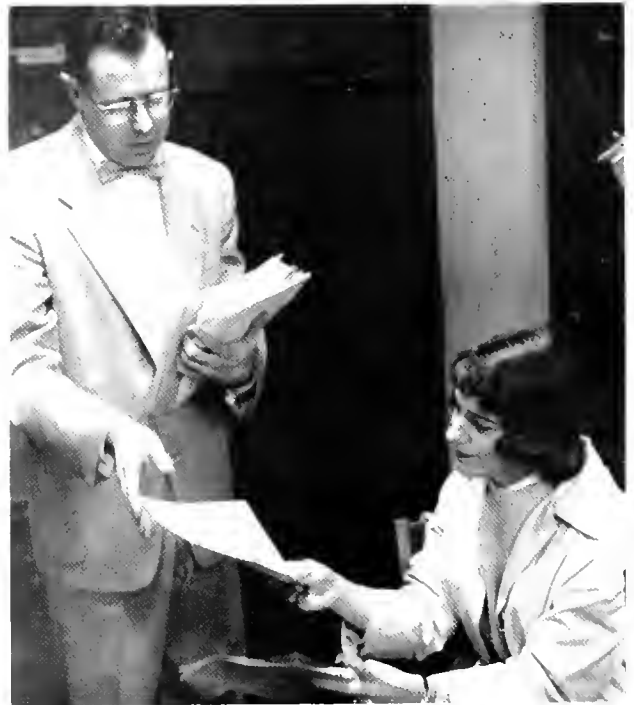

His family life, hopes and dreams and fears and ambitions are hidden from the student. His work is never-ending. Examinations must be prepared and graded. Term papers and reports must be carefully read. Special lectures and counseling sessions demand his time.

The prof is a student himself, studying to enrich his mind and life. He is constantly seeking better methods of teaching his subject. His first concern is for his students. Grading is a difficult part of his job.

Anticipation awaits another familiar task of the prof — handing back the test.

Ohio University men, tapped on the third Monday of April each year, serve by ushering, sponsoring a Comic Field Day and a dance for Greek pledges, proctoring study halls. They decorate the campus at Christmas and publish a brochure for men going through rush. Blue Key honors sophomore and junior fraternity men chosen on the basis of scholarship, campus activities, personality and leadership. A group of Florida University students founded Blue Key in 1924 when they were called together to help coordinate plans for a variety of activities. They asked to continue meeting to discuss ways to improve student life, and were rewarded by increased student interest. Since then, more than one hundred schools have felt the need for inter-organization planning and have petitioned for Blue Key membership.

achievement in the field of journalism. S. COLLEGE THEATRE

Copy by Dick Feagler

When you walk up on the stage, you experience one horrible moment of complete aloneness. Then you are caught in the spirit and the lines of the ages sustain you.

Quite a few years back in antiquity, a Greek unconformist by the name of Thespis, emerged from the obscurity of a group of dramatic warblers called "goatsingers" and spoke the first recorded line of dialogue. What prompted Thespis to do this has not survived the haze of time. Perhaps it was dissatisfaction with the old order or just man's innate urge to ham it up before an audience. Whatever may have been Thespis' reason for his flight into theatrics, talented enthusiasts still follow his teachings today. Hence, the great institution of the Theater.

The play is MARY STUART, or at least it will be after hours of striving for perfection. Grinding work!

What makes the magic of dramatic effect? Not just the lighting, scenery, acting, but a blending of all of these on opening night.

Perhaps the theater is the art form most taxing on its sons and daughters. At any rate, theater majors at any university enjoy a notoriety that breathes of legend. Strangely enough, the theatrical set is, in general, dedicated to the destruction of sham (in its more hypocritical forms anyway.) If the world is a stage, then the portion of that stage that is the theater, dedicates itself to pin-pointing and accurately portraying the foibles and enigmas of mankind, with an eye toward a better universal understanding.

Somewhere along in rehearsal, there comes the moment when you know you'll never make it—but, you do.

In university theatre, everybody does everything. Witness these gymnastics.

Moments of tense chatter before curtain time. Frightful moments, frightfully rewarding.

Faulkner's neighbors? No, just a scene from NO TIME FOR SERGEANTS. The mood of the audience—pure hilarity.

Show Biz is a wonderful biz, full of the excitement of openings, the sorrow of pannings, the thunderous exhilaration of spontaneous applause, the heartbreaking reality of an audience coughing its boredom toward the stage. And underlying the moments of glory are the hours of hard work, the groping toward memorization and interpretation.

For those juniors and seniors who had met the selective scholastic and professional requirements, there was the high honor of being a member of NCP. This honorary for future actresses and actors is very small in number, but claims many of America's most distinguished theatre people as past members. OU's Dean Voigt was the first advisor of the local chapter, the founding chapter of NCP. A spring banquet for dramatics and art majors was sponsored by the group.

In the dressing room, in the wings, anywhere behind the scenes, the Footlighters may be seen. They do the things that must be done to aid those in front—building props, painting scenery, spreading make-up on a multitude of worried or relaxed or worried faces. The curtain opens, and although the Footlighters are not seen, their work is obvious.

Long library sessions in search of information to build a case were common to members of the men's and women's Varsity Debate teams. References are read whether they have chosen a negative or affirmative stand. Debate boxes were full of evidence for or against the proposition, "Resolved: That Congress should be given the power to reverse Supreme Court decisions." Debaters traveled through three states taking their evidence and a good argument and returning with a good record.

AERho is a radio and television honorary fraternity. Exchange from campus to campus comes with the publication of a chapter newsletter. The OU chapter held a banquet in the spring where awards were given for outstanding programs and performers and staff positions for the next year were announced. Radio marathons raised funds for United Appeals and the Cancer Society. Interviews, excerpts from convocations and the sounds of dance bands which visited the campus during the year were compiled into a recording of a year at OU and sold.

Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honorary, is a newcomer at OU, being established in 1956. Membership requirements are a 3.0 average, twenty hours of social science and a major in economics, sociology or government. New members are initiated at the first meeting each year.

Delta Sigma Pi is the professional commerce honorary organized to create better relations between commerce students and the commercial world. Alpha Omicron Chapter was chartered in 1925. Program centers around the world of business and industry. A representative from U. S. Steel spoke on industrial accounting. The importance of interviews was discussed at another meeting. The

Once more the familiar turban was seen on campus, in the shape of an "O." Varsity O initiates wore them, and carried life savers, for the enjoyment of active members. Later these men who had worn the turbans ushered at basketball games, sold pop and ice cream at football games and participated in one of the ten major sports in which they earned their varsity letter. Uniting in a fraternal effort, the men of Varsity O treated their dads to dinner on Father's Weekend, helped in the Athens Heart Fund Drive, and worked to keep athletic spirit alive in OU students.

It takes poise and deep concentration to gain those first place points.

MERMEN WORK FOR PERFECTION

Bob Eastman demonstrates his precision strokes in the 440-yard freestyle.

The starters gun is sounded and the four swimmers are off in quest of a win for their respective teams.

It takes many long hours of practice to perfect a dive and this diver hopes to make it pay off.

Fletcher Gilders made his first year as Bobcat swimming coach a highly successful one as he directed the mermen to a 5-2 dual meet season record.

OU finished fourth in both the conference relays and championships.

Dual meet wins were recorded against Western Michigan, Pittsburgh, Notre Dame, Miami and Kent State. The swimmers lost to Kenyon and conference champion Bowling Green.

Leading the mermen was junior Tom Boyce who set three new varsity and one pool record.

Sophomore diver Chuck Woodlee was also very impressive.

"The boys really gave it everything they had all season and I was very proud of their performances," said Gilders.

OU GOLFERS DEFEND TITLE

The Ohio University Golf team, under the capable supervision of Coach Kermit Blosser, opened its 1960 campaign with hopes of successfully defending its conference crown. The Bobcats had won the Mid-American title three years in a row for the honor of being OU's winningest team.

The outlook was definitely bright as Blosser had nine returning lettermen, eight of whom were seniors.

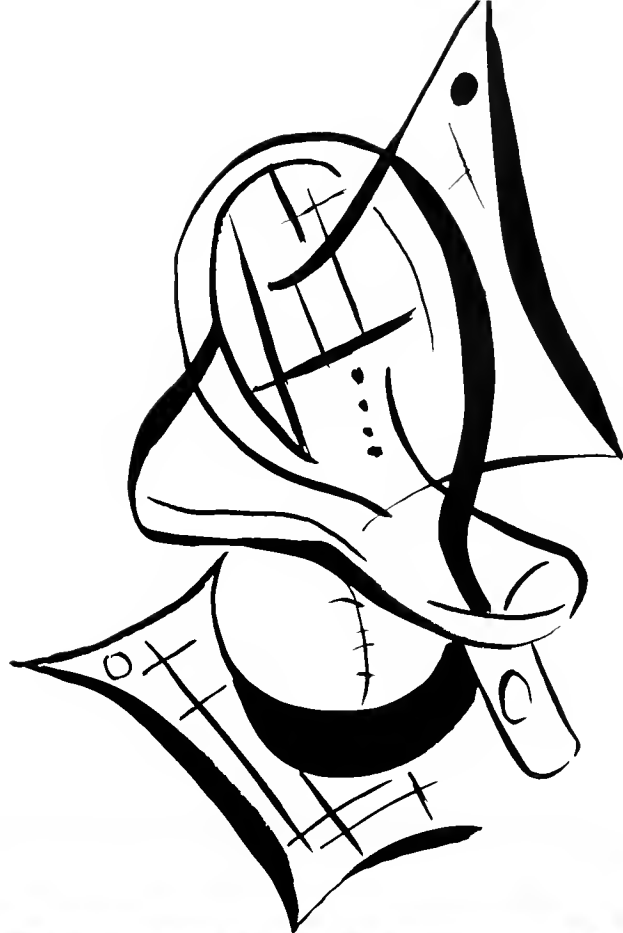

EXPERIENCE PROVES USEFUL TO NETMEN

With five returning lettermen, the Ohio University tennis team, coached by Fletcher Gilders, was rated as one of the top Mid-American Conference powers.

Leading the netmen was star singles player Paul Gates. Senior Frank Hartman also gave the netters a top notch singles player and could be counted on to do a good job in the doubles competition.

Dick Emde and Rick Jantz, who saw considerable action the past season, were also on hand to fill in at singles and double spots.

Earl Motz was also scheduled to play a big role for the netmen.

Row one: Assistant Coach Dick Fryman, Leon Chapman, Bob Bird, Cal Kondres, Rick Jantz. Row two: Earl Motz, Harvey Krumholtz, Bill Hollman, Dick Emde, Paul Gates.

Spring track season opened with high hopes on the part of coach Ston Huntsman and his trackmen.

Under the warm southeastern Ohio sun, the Bobcat track squad embarked on a season with improvement as its ultimate goal. Invaluable experience was gained in the indoor track season.

TRACK TEAM GAINS EXPERIENCE

However, chances for improvement over the 1959 second-place finish behind Western Michigan in the Mid-American Conference Relays appeared slim. OU's All-American track star Les Carney graduated and other league schools were expected to be greatly improved.

Although the tracksters were expected to be better balanced, OU's losses through graduation were greater than those at other conference schools.

The Broncos were expected to continue their domination of the MAC championship relays with the Bobcats, Miami and Bowling Green following in any order.

Vince Scales

With four starting pitchers, an All-American and several all-conference players gone from last year's co-championship team, the baseballers of Bob Wren faced a rebuilding task.

Coach Wren, beginning his twelfth year at the helm, searched for the player who could fill the shoes of All-American Lamar Jacobs who was graduated.

The infield, however, appeared set with seniors Dale Bandy, Gary Wade and Bob Maver holding down positions.

Co-captains Wade and Maver were expected to give the Bobcats a nifty double play combination. Maver missed most of last season because of a broken leg.

Hard-hitting junior Vince Scales was ready for another season at first base.

The catching duties were in the capable hands of left-hand hitting Armand O'Neil. "Army" hit .270 last season and picked off many enemy runners who tried to steal on him.

Base running techniques, important for all players to learn and master, pay off.

Umpire prepares for that important decision as runner hits the dust.

Senior outfielder Rudy Kalfas gave OU one of the finest ball-chasers in the Mid-American Conference.

Wren's biggest problem, however, was in trying to find replacements for pitchers Ralph Nuzum, Bob Russell, Mickey Urban and Dick Butler. The foursome won all but one of the Bobcats' games last season.

Tom Kochendorfer and Ed Pentecost were given a chance to show their pitching talents. Wren also experimented with some of his infielders and outfielders in an attempt to strengthen his mound forces.

The addition of Sophomores Murray Cook, Larry Thomas and Drew Ward strengthened the Bobcats.

On paper, the team appeared very green, however Wren had entered many seasons in that same situation and on each occasion managed to field a winning nine.

The Bobcats' 55-13 record over the last three years will attest to Wren's ability to establish a winning combination.

"If we can continue this record, all my worries would be over," said the OU coach.

SENIOR YEAR

Senior year is full of last times. It's the year to look for quiet instead of crowds. There are more faces to say "Hi!" to, but even more who've said "Goodbye."

It's a sorting-out year. Party favors, class notes, Post clippings are on the bottom of a pile of applications, chamber of commerce comments on a new town, a Time Magazine with the election news well-thumbed.

Hours are rationed, doled out in order of importance, with a few "last-thing" type hours, and no good excuse out, "I'm a senior!"

It's a "what next?" year full of decisions—the wedding dress to be fitted on weekends, the job interview that cancels a Lake Hope afternoon.

It's the year that "Alma Mater, Ohio" makes a senior feel very wise and old and just a little sad, when suddenly he realizes he's singing all the words.

wisdom . . .

... and love."

"So depart . . ."

The Ohio University Alumni Association, which celebrated its 100th anniversary last year, represents all graduates and former students in striving to establish a mutually beneficial relationship between the University and its alumni.

Official magazine of the Association is THE OHIO ALUMNUS, published for and about alumni eight times a year. In addition, a record of your address, your family, and your career is maintained at the Alumni Association headquarters in Cutler Hall. This information is kept up to date by your efforts in contacting the office (Box 285, Athens) when you have address changes and other news to report.

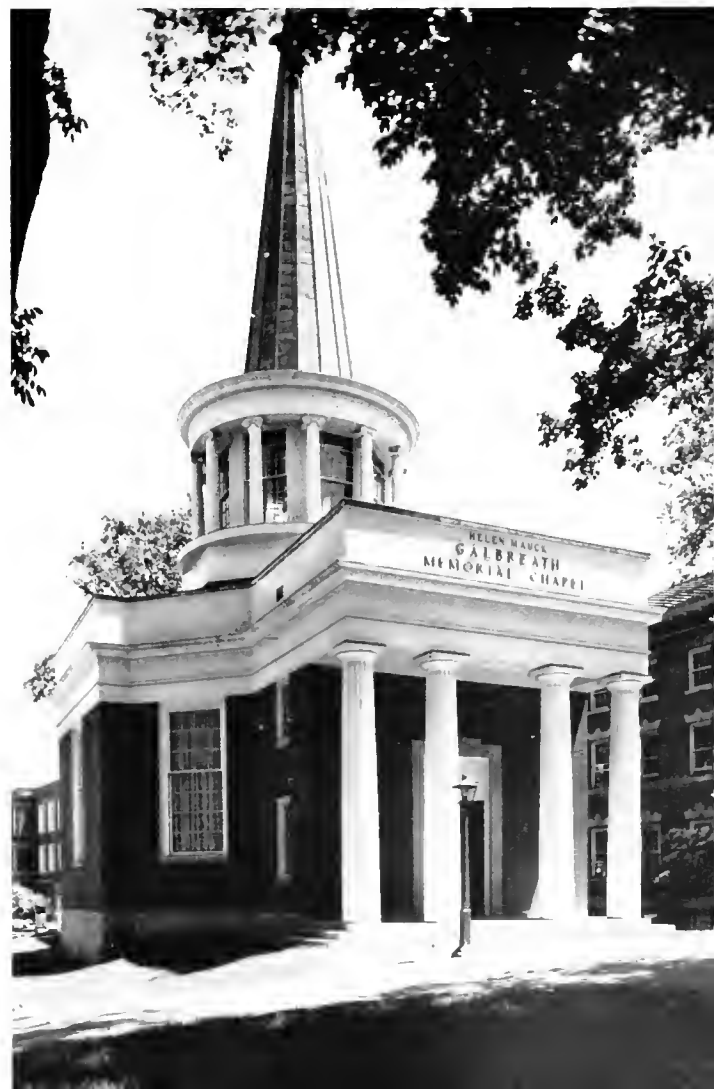

Alumni-sponsored events, such as the special Homecoming luncheon in the Ice Rink, preserve fellowships that become more and more important as the years go by. Alumni dinners and meetings in key cities throughout the nation, and in some foreign countries, also are held throughout the year.

College days need never end. The thrill of a Homecoming football game does not decrease after graduation. Members of the Alumni Association get priority on reserved seat sales.

You will enjoy maintaining membership in the Alumni Association. THE OHIO ALUMNUS will keep you up-to-date on campus changes, and your membership will be a pleasant link with your University. Many alumni prefer to assure a life-time relationship with Ohio University through the Honor Membership Plan. Details can be obtained from the Alumni Office.

The Helen Mauck Galbreath Memorial Chapel, erected in 1958, was given by an alumnus to honor his wife . . . and his university.

Last minute briefings and flight itinerary are given first.

THEY TOOK TO THE AIR

Copy by Dave Parker

The Arnold Air Society, the only national honor society for Air Force military students had a full year as far as air mileage was concerned. As in previous years, Arnold Air Society's members who were selected on the basis of leadership and scholarship, regardless of rank ventured to the largest air force base in the world. Their destination, Eglin Air Force Base in Florida. Naturally as only an air force cadet would travel, the group made it's way to the sunny south via C-119 cargo plane. The trip was full of excitement for most, a new experience for some who had never flown, and an education for all.

The primary reason for the Society's trip to Florida was to familiarize new basic cadets with a real air base and what makes it "tick."

It was a long trip, but there was time to rest up.

Ejection seat testing stand teaches prospective pilots how to save their necks if and when it becomes necessary.

Oh, that's how the Air Force shoots 'em down.

Just like college this mess hall, but you can't top 30c a meal.

Gee, all that, just to land on?

Sure would be swell to ride to classes in.

A little orientation to the life of an Air Force officer doesn't hurt anyone. Athens weather? More snow.

There was much to see, much to learn and much for them to remember. A lasting impression and first hand knowledge of what the Air Force is like will always be with them.

Now, they must make the final decision. They know now that they will not be plunging blindly into something they know nothing about. They have met the opportunity as it presented itself. All that is left now is up to the individual, he alone will decide.

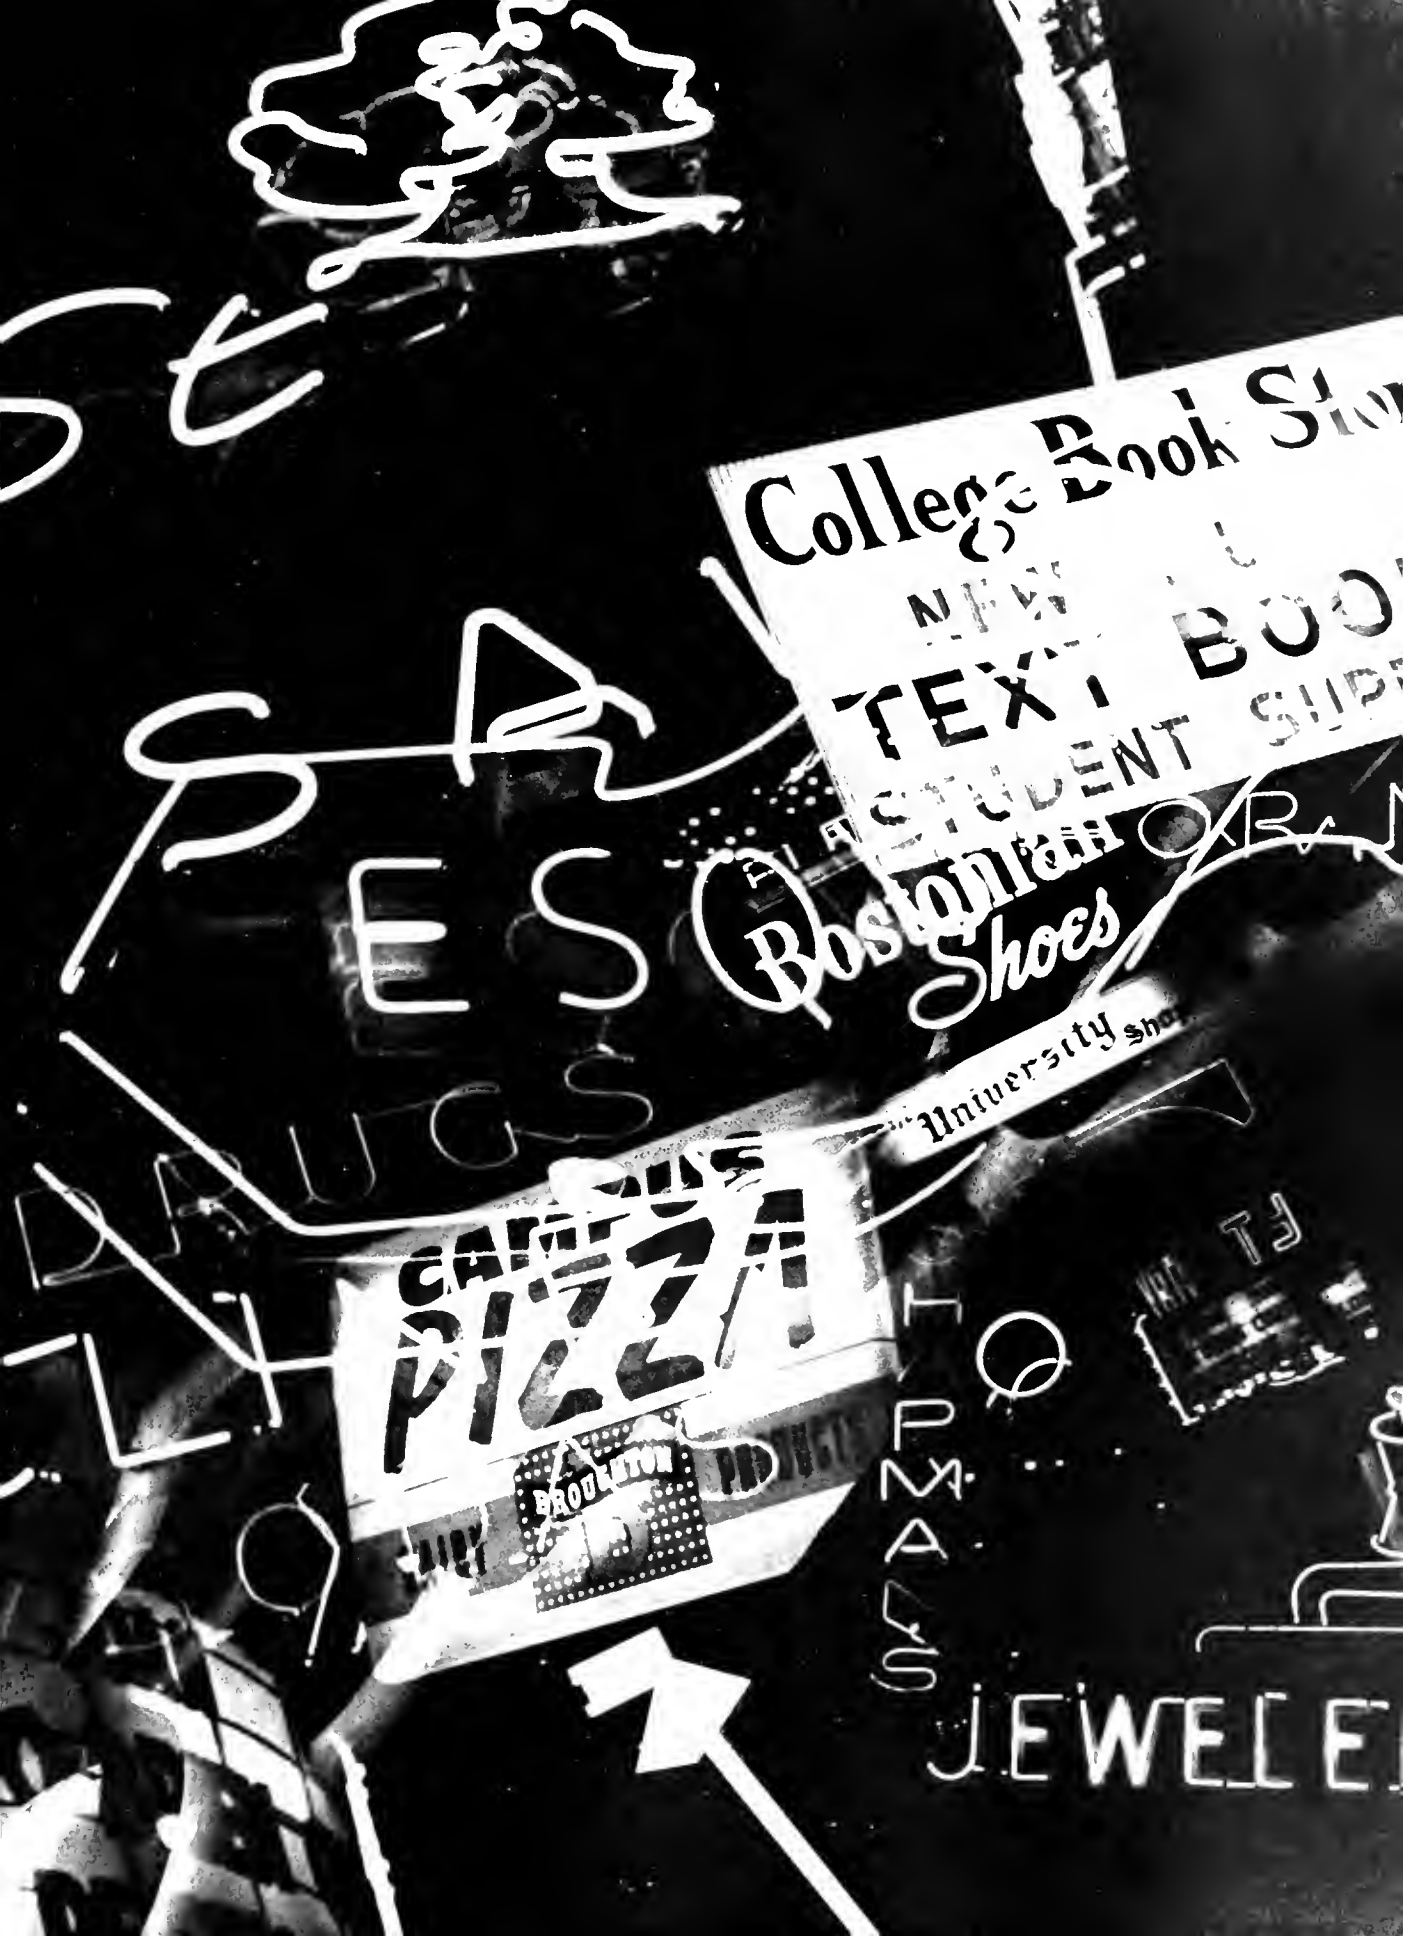

March into that Florida sun for the last time, cadet. Too bad, but those professors miss you.

All good things must come to an end, but maybe we'll be back.

Fasten safety belts, check parachutes—homeward bound.

Hey, Gang! Let's go to the TOWNE HOUSE. You heard me, man, I said the TOWNE HOUSE. You say you've never heard of it? Why everybody at Ohio University knows about the TOWNE HOUSE. No it's not where the town council meets. Where are you from, anyway? Miami? That explains it. You see the TOWNE HOUSE is a student hangout in Athens town and just everyone knows about this swingin' spot. I'd like to introduce you to some real fine food and some wonderful people. There go some of the early morning regulars—Clay May, Tom and Denny Mossholder and Pat Taggart. What do you mean it's crowded in here? You ought to be here on a convocation day! Did you see where the waitress just took those orders of coffee and toasted rolls? Right over to Mary Digel, Joann Pardae and Mary Peller. Since we can't get a seat yet I'd like to show you something. See that vacant lot across the street? Last year there was a building there, but the migration to the TOWNE HOUSE after the basketball games became so large that officials felt it necessary to have it torn down. Ah, here's a booth. Come on, squeeze in. We ought to be able to get six in here. What'll you have—one of those hot chocolates or a big glass of tomato juice? You're going to have toast and tea? What's the matter, you got an ulcer? I forgot, you're from Miami. You know, gang, I'll bet those Betas—Dave Neff, Don Becker, Dave Briggs, Bill Gore, John Ault, Jim Rutkaskie, Ken Donelson and John Gosling are having a conference over there to see if they are ever going to get that house built. You know, it's taken them 50 years to start building and with luck it may be completed within the next 50! Did you notice how fast the conversation broke up when the waitress brought those orders of TOWNE HOUSE ham and eggs? Well, must be ten o'clock. A whole new flock just came in. What? You say a bunch of guys in skin diver outfits just came in? No, that's just Tom Bollinger, Skip Knight, Vince Fuedo, and Bruno Bornino. They are Phi Deltis and they're waiting for the Hocking River to come up to their doorstep. I'll bet you they even order some of those TOWNE HOUSE shrimp or scallops. They're trying to get used to sea food. Oh, no. Here comes their leader Fat Jack McNeil. Did you hear what he just ordered? A TOWNE HOUSE double-decker Daagwood-type sandwich. Here come some KDs. You know those KDs are not dummies. They've moved closer to the TOWNE HOUSE but it didn't meet with much approval from their old neighbors, the PKAs. I guess the Pike's feel pretty bad about losing such attractive neighbors especially since now they're stuck with the Tau Gams—guys, you know. Over there are some of the everyday crowd, John Waller, and Carol Retter, Jim Miller and Ja Hart. Here comes a bunch of gals from sorority row. There's Cindy Laxley and Phyllis Yarrow from the Chi O house. Carol Malkmus, Daris Pschesang and Susie Miller, Alpha Xi's and the Pi Phis are represented by Marti McCormick, Cornie Leithalf and Lois Roper. They're all going to order one of those fancy TOWNE HOUSE salads. I'll bet. You asked if there is any competitive spirit among sororities? Oh, it's tremendous. At first the Pi Phis, Chi

Os and then the Alpha Xis tried to outdo each other in remodeling and now they're competing to see who can pay those bills first. See those smiling girls over there eating those TOWNE HOUSE french fries and burgers? They're Alpha Gams. They have no such worry of competition with remodeled buildings, except perhaps the new Fine Art. Building that's going to be five stories high. What are you staring at? Oh, I see. Those guys in the knit caps are John Skinner, Al Galletty, Wally Johnson and Gene Shiveley, some boys from the Sigma Nu house. They have a toboggan commuter service from the top of Congress Street Hill. It's pretty tough sleddin' for them lately. No snow! Boy, the way those boys are tearing into those TOWNE HOUSE Boy-O-Boy double-decker burgers you'd think they never ate up on that hill. Say, there's Mike Tressler, Dave Leety, Phil Shafer and Lloyd Furer from the Delta house ordering a round of chili and hamburger barkels. You know those Deltas will try anything. I hear they are trying to negotiate with the government in order to use the Post Office as an annex. You say you wonder who the fellas are at the cash register with all the sacks full of good TOWNE HOUSE food ready to take out? Those are the TKEs getting ready to make the 15 mile trek to their house. Terry Leedom told me that the sandwiches are for part of a safety measure in case they get hungry on the trip home. I don't know but I've heard that they sometimes even play the humanitarian role and set a few extra sacks of those good TOWNE HOUSE burgers on the doorstep for Steve Gelfner, Terry Eisenberg and Mike Neben, some of the Phi Eps, as they pass by on their trip into the Morris Ave. wilderness. You know, gang, when you eat here at the TOWNE HOUSE you eat the best and it's not very long before you become a member of the I Ato

Let fraternify. Over there are some girls from the Phi Mu. Barbie Ellis, Binnie Jo LeFever, and Joan McCoy. Rumor has it that the Phi Mu's have a very unique pledge system. It seems that each of their pledges have to pump gas twice a week at the service station near their house. It doesn't bother the pledges, though they get a little weather beaten—but man, what a grip! Right behind us are Dick Biddle, Rag Hakala and Ted Smathers from Theta Chi land. They're really playing havoc with those fabric's TOWNE HOUSE T-bone steaks. Did you know that the Theta Chis have been trying for 35 years to get that green University building that runs from Vets V. age to the campus to stop for them? Here comes Teddy List and Mary Ann Vaughn, a couple of Sigma Kappas. I'll say yes, add, they are tired of drinking cider and stopped to get some good TOWNE HOUSE coffee. The Sigma Kappas have a cider chug every year. Yeh, they brew the cider in their basement. Of course the best stuff is what they have left over from the year before. Hey, there's Carolyn Beards, She's a member of AEPi and she told me the other day that the AEPis are thinking of forming their own safety patrol for the corner of "Wait and Don't Walk". Gang, don't look now, but there are the OU hockey heroes, Rick Jantz, Pete Worden, Bob Simond and Warren Wissman. Look at all that wonderful TOWNE HOUSE chow these guys are getting. Roast beef, marzetti and beef stew is on the top of their popularity list. There's Dick Yurko, Skip Stout, Jim Buchanan, Paul Rock and Dick Shockley about to order up some of those great TOWNE HOUSE club steaks. Man, did you see that order of pork chops and hamburger steak just go by? Talking about hamburger steak at the TOWNE HOUSE Emmanuel told me the other day that they have renamed it "The Old Standby." The story is that when the guys come in at noon for lunch, they look at the menu, figuring they'll wait until dinner to have the special for the day. But the time dinner rolls around the special will inevitably have run out. As a result, good old hamburger steak smothered in onions, gets the bid. Well, if it isn't some of the Phi Tau throwing over Jim Chapman, Jim Cary, Dave Miller, Daw Reichley, Paul Radomsky, Bill Turner, Tom Wessles and Dave Parker. What are you guys doing in here at this time of the afternoon? I thought you were among the 10 o'clock coffee club here at the TOWNE HOUSE. Chicken? I know you can't beat that TOWNE HOUSE fried chicken, but did you have to mention that in front of my friends? You see, they're broke, and I can't foot the bill for all of us, even if the TOWNE HOUSE is the most economical place to eat. Now that those Phi Taus have left let me tell you why they're called the throwing axes. They have thirteen annex windows to their credit this for SAE, that's Bob Kannan, Larry Leedy, Jim Moore—the neighbors, SAEs. Man, do they look beat! I'll bet they're tired out from watching their pledges clean those lions all day long. There's nothing like a tasty TOWNE HOUSE ham on a big order of baked ham to give you that extra energy when you need it most desperately. You, Miami boys, ought to keep this in mind, especially when the OU Bobcats are heading your way. I just noticed another change-over of faces. There are some ADPis over in the corner. Sally Baughman and Diane Scholl finally decided what to order—macaroni and cheese with a hamburger in the basket. Roger Plauche told me the other night that the ADPis have been trying to extend their house to the north so they could eventually hook on to Lindley Hall and have their entire chapter living in the house. Did you catch a glimpse of those Acacias breathing sighs of relief? I have an idea that they intend to try to settle their nerves after watching the 7:05 B & O that just roared through their living room. Dig that Pat Deming, Claire Jones and Patty Wynn of the Zeta sorority standing at the I Ato box. One of their sister's told me last week that the Zeta's now have season tickets for the MIA movies. It makes for a convenient ticket since they live right across from Mem. Aha, Umm, look at those cubs. Looks like those girls are about to tackle. Just another nice pre-dinner at the TOWNE HOUSE kitchen. In front of us? That's Joanie Shade, Judy Galene and Mary Olson. There are some of the prettiest neighbors the Sigs ever had. You know, the Theta Phis are a relatively new team here at OU. Milt Karlosky, Gary Tildes, Bob Hynes, Larry Schade and Bill Hill were saying that the only thing they could ever see past their windows at the Sig house was newspaper. The Theta Phis must read a lot. The Sigs have taken a good appetite that they're going to have some ham from the TOWNE HOUSE grill before they head for home. You say you're worried about those guys over there with their dirty neck and blood shot eyes? Sweat it not, for they are Larry Spiegel, Gary Lichtman and Gene Maeroff, Phi Sigs.

and there are many, many more names we wanted to include before the page ran out of room. Best of luck to the seniors; we hope we'll see the rest of you next year and thanks to all.

Copy by Gail Larrick

It begins at a mixer, or in a class, on when a mutual friend thinks they'd like other.

At first it's "hello!" and a smile on campus; then a cake date . . . and another.

And it grows from there to shared things . . . a storing up of thoughts to be told each time they're together.

It's understanding that finances mean even the MIA is out, or that the psych test takes precedence over an uptown flick.

It's learning that there's a great capacity for giving in the human heart.

There are Cinderella nights in formals, and snow ball fights; walks by the Hacking, occasional spats . . . and the days when they're sure no one else has ever felt this way.

It's all mixed up with things like faith and desire and trust . . . it's falling in love.

I saw her first at a dance . . . with someone else.

Monday I thought maybe I saw her again . . . in the hall.

I didn't concentrate in class . . . little things reminded me of her.

She was at the hockey game, and I thought she smiled at me.

I saw her one evening in the sculpture lab, and I almost stopped . . .

One day she was in the library.

We walked across campus to her dorm, and she said "Yes, coffee tomorrow."

In the hall . . .

At the files . . .

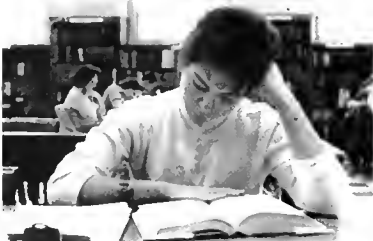

I spoke to her.

She did smile at me . . .

. . . we studied together.

I took her to the Center . . . we talked and danced and laughed together.

I called for her for The Dance . . . we stayed till "Goodnight, Sweetheart" . . .

And then I took my girl home.

MIAMI MIGRATION SADDENS BOBCATS

Photos by The Staff
Copy by Gene Maeroff

The long ride west wasn't bad at all.

It seemed a shame to ruin Miami's Sesquicentennial Homecoming by ending their undefeated record.

A college student's school year is crowded with many big days and weekends. It's no wonder that with so much going on the student is fortunate if just a few such weekends are recalled.

It's a safe bet that not many of those who made the trip have forgotten that eventful Migration Weekend at Oxford. It is a weekend that is remembered not so much for its joy and excitement as for its disappointment.

It was a bleak weekend right from the very beginning. The sky was cloudy and it was raining when the exodus began, but OU's spirited football fans remained undaunted. Their Bobcats had won four straight and they knew that after seventeen years of frustration against Miami this was to be the day.

It was a cocky bunch of Bobcats that converged on Miami's Sesquicentennial Homecoming. They swarmed through Miami's streets, restaurants and bars.

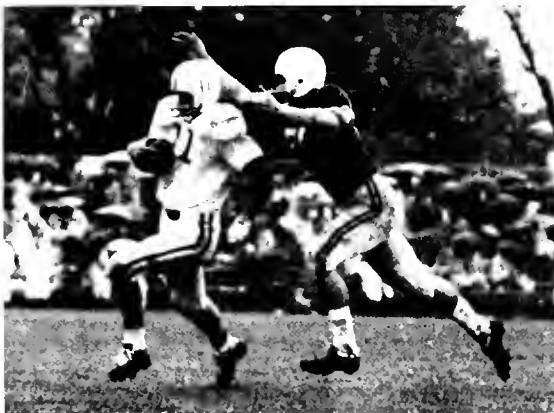

Not to be outdone by Miami's parade, the OU students staged a parade of their own. No one could forget that spirit.

OU students took over Oxford as though it belonged to them.

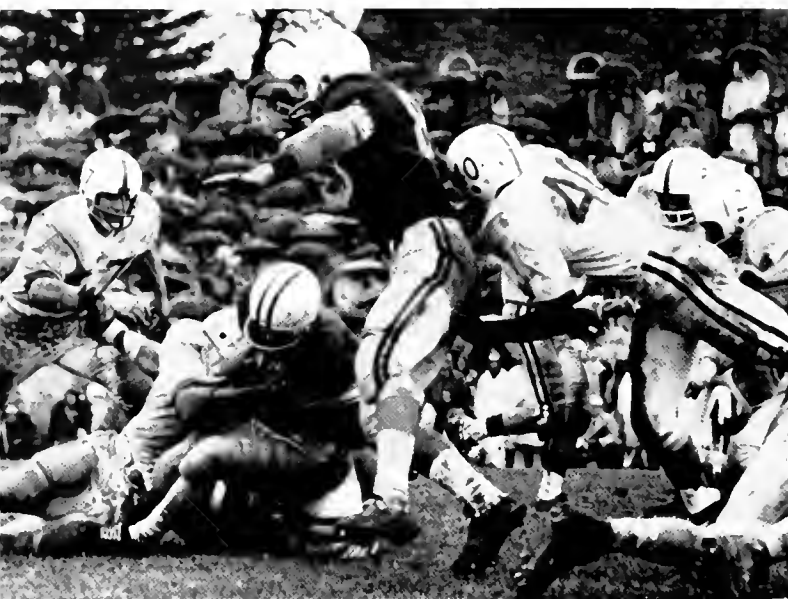

The visitors hoped the rain would cut the Redskin's passing attack and not harm OU's ground offense. They hoisted their umbrellas and waited for the kickoff.

Sophomore quarterback Otis Wagner was a surprise starter with his broken hand heavily taped.

Not to be outdone by a Homecoming Parade, the Phi Delts led an OU parade to the Miami Stadium.

It was a hard fought battle but Miami's offensive attack just couldn't be stopped.

The injury list for the Bobcats read like a team roster.

It was a wonder that anybody could see the game with all of those black umbrellas raised. Everyone tried to think about the victory they were expecting, and to forget about the wind and rain.

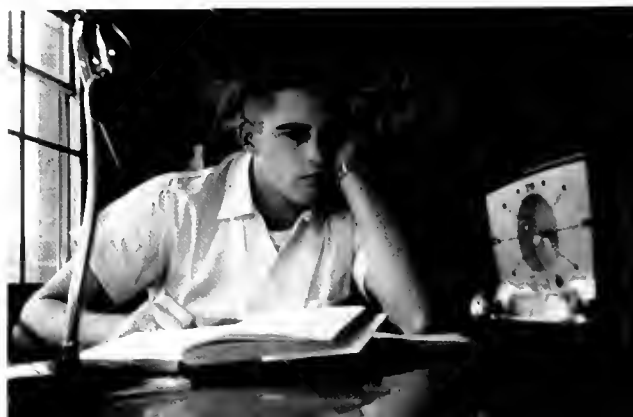

But pretty soon people discovered that it was better to think about the rain than the game—in fact it was better to think about anything than the game.

The powerful Bobcats, the team that had gathered a larger following than OU football teams in many a year, was being humiliated. The Redskin backs were taking turns running the ball over, around and through Ohio's bigger line. Meanwhile the Bobcats were doing all they could to keep from losing yardage.

One after one the OU gridders were being felled. Ohio was a crippled crew at the end of that long afternoon.

The score . . . ? Oh, that was 24-0!
It was a long ride home.

Some stayed home and listened on the radio. Maybe they were the lucky ones—they didn't have to make that long ride home.

PIZZA: AN OU HABIT

Photos by Ron Warren
Copy by Carol Earley
and Bob Moore

"To go" orders are kept warm on the oven, with nemes on.

From the middle of the green to the corners of the campus, a fragrance that cannot be ignored pulls students from books and bull sessions to the pizza counter. Although the psychological reason behind the popularity of this delicacy might frustrate Freud, it doesn't phase OU students who count on pizza as an essential part of their night life . . .

. . . and their study habits. Pizza represents "the pause that makes greasy," a chance to call in orders for half the floor of the dorm—that half which is usually brake—and then to wait while cheese and pepperoni cover up the rolled-out dough . . .

. . . or to play errand boy if delivery takes too long. Hundreds of pizzas are delivered each night, and hundreds more are picked up, taken gently to the dorm and impatiently grabbed. Small, medium, large; cheese, pepperoni, anchovies, mushrooms . . . and the other fellow better not take more than his share!

Meanwhile, money is being collected at the dormitory.

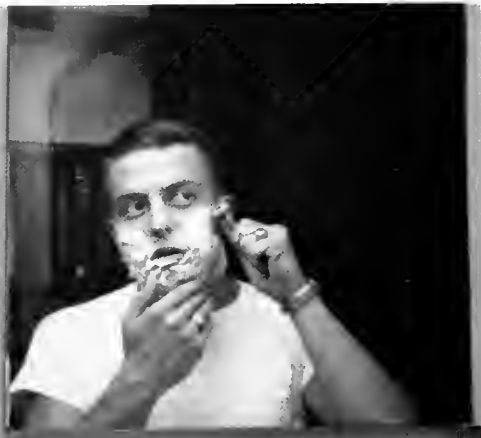

The delivery man is a welcome sight as he brings the pizza to the dorm.

Many hands make light work. It doesn't take long for the pizza to go.

OU WEEKENDS: FAMILY AFFAIRS

Photos by Dave Currie and Ron Warren
Copy by Nancy Jarus

Down here at OU students pay tribute to Moms a week early. On a hectic Mayday weekend they try to crowd in every campus activity to make Mom a college student. She stumbles along brick walks, stands in cafeteria lines (wondering why her offspring complains about the food). She swims in a sea of faces and names, tours from the Home Ec department to the new Life Science Building, hears the juke box in the crowded Frontier Room—and she can't wait till next year. And somehow, for Mothers, it never rains!

"You climb that hill how many times a day?" She stops to rest.

Mare rest, she says, and write home, and then she's on her way home.

Dad plats a touchdown play in a close game.

Fathers show up sans in a rec room pool contest.

It's nat the coach's last word that gives the extra boost; it's Dad's, "I'll be watching, san."

OU Dads never tire. Once they're coaxed to the campus on a red and gold weekend in November they want to see everything—and usually do. They listen to Saturday morning history lectures and visit the engineering or the industrial arts building. They see a swim meet, play in a bowling tournament and visit that tavern they've heard about. They add a lot while they're here—even a football loss doesn't seem so bad when Dad says, "It was a good game. We almost did it!"

Broadway calibre performance combined with compus humor . . . Dad is entertained at the Varsity O Shaw.

OU's first honorary father is cangratulated by a student in charge of weekend plans.

Coed Prom, the one time she asked him out and picked up the tab. The week was a busy one . . . she had to buy a ticket and work with snips of ribbon and a miniature slide rule or sports car until she had a corsage for him. Saturday she washed her hair and pressed the dress and voted for Prom King.

He was surprised at the phone call but it pleased him to know he'd been the one she asked. She had said "I'll pick you up at eight," and he remembered the long hill she'd have to climb to get there. She giggled when she asked, "What color suit will you wear?" and he wondered what kind of a corsage she'd dream up.

Turnabout umbrella handling is her job.

She was dressing when she noticed the rain . . . of all nights! She picked up the pink umbrella and the corsage in the square white official-looking box and started to his dorm in her spiked heels. And then it began.

She opened doors, helped him with his coat, lit his cigarettes and carried the umbrella. His corsage didn't win a prize, and he wasn't crowned king, but he liked the corsage and he felt like a king.

The dance was over, and he jingled the 30 pennies he'd brought for penny-a-minute so that she could stay out till one o'clock. And that was Coed Prom.

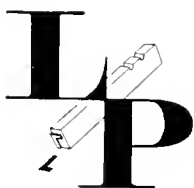

Semi-finalists votes go into the box for counting . . . a king is chosen.

The king is congratulated.

Midnight . . . the last dance and then home.

ATHENS WINTER 1960 FASHION

Photos by Jim Hagedon and Bob Loufek
Copy by Al Cohn

Snow? In Athens? Well, it happens, now and then, but nine winters in ten it either melts before hitting the ground or, on the rare occasions it sticks, degenerates into a black, unappetizing slush.

Nineteen-sixty was the tenth year.

"The Big Snow" got under way early one February Saturday morning. Would it ever stop?

It did, finally, but not until the following night, six cotton-thick inches later (not counting mountainous drifts).

A landlady living in Athens since 1907 "never saw anything like it." Oonoo, Alaska, had nothing on us.

At first, students didn't know quite how to react. But by Saturday night some interesting plans were well-formulated. Results were not always as expected, but they too were at all times interesting.

For once, the hills of Athens served a purpose other than promoting cardiac cases.

This male skateless Sonja Heine was pretty lucky . . .

For some, "The Big Snow" meant excitement. For others, it spurred romance.

Ever go tobogganing—without a toboggan?

. . . this one wasn't quite as fortunate.

Sliding down on your knees is a man's sport, bud.

A pretty sight, but this was no day for shortcutting across the campus "green."

Having a car at school offered untold advantages.

"War Is Hell," especially in the form of a snowball fight.

Fresh, clean bobby sox never had much of a chance . . .

. . . nor did henpecked boyfriends.

It was also a maintenance man's nightmare.

Frustrated artists had a field day.

"... and fullback Brooks (?) crashed through for a TD!"

Their pinmates probably skipped town.

In some snowball fights it was hard to tell who was on whose side.

Sun and time, the natural enemies of snow, eventually erased the huge drifts, hard-packed "ski trails" (a la East Mulberry Street), and once-proud snowmen.

But the memories of "The Big Snow" were revived, and revived, several times in the winter of '59-'60. Snows of similar proportions fell three more times—once even in mid-March, before Spring finally took over.

It wasn't like Athens at all.

 Zwolnik, Robert—178, 297

This is the 360th page and the 13th month. Between the first page, the first month, and now, the 1960 Athena staff has incurred a great debt of gratitude to those who contributed faith, crying towels and enthusiastic work to the efforts of the staff.

To advisors Charles Smith, Tom Turnbull and Clarence White, for whom giving advice often meant sacrificing a lunch hour; to OU Center's understanding room-reservers Mrs. Janice Bixler and Miss Maude Dorsey, to Lawrence Luckada who cleaned our impossible office, and to the counter girls who saved us left-over coffee; to Olin Griffin and Eugene Clark of Olan Mills Portrait Studio, as well as to the three photographers and to all the men and women who showed the proofs; to John and Pete Good and Virgil Baker of Lawhead Press, who's unstinted time and thoughtful suggestions encouraged us over the rough spots; to Joe DeOrion and John Steffen of Canton Engraving, who's cooperation supplied us with many last-minute engravings; to George Barber's of Kingsport Press who's cover-designing advice was given in the best southern manner; and to all our pinmates, boyfriends and girlfriends who shared the defeats and triumphs of the '60, we give our sincere

THANKS
 1960 Athena staff
